HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — As a result of a wide-ranging nationwide settlement with the country's major tobacco-processing industries, Pennsylvania growers who produced a U.S. Type 32 tobacco (which includes Maryland 609 variety) in 1998 could be eligible for compensation.

Producers who qualify can receive a check, made payable from the National Tobacco Growers Trust, perhaps by the first of the year, according to Russell C. Redding, Pennsylvania deputy secretary of agriculture, Marketing, Promotion, and Program Services.

The Trust, according to information supplied by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA), was created as a result of a Master Settlement Agreement (MSA) between Pennsylvania and 45 other states and the nation's CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices; slaughter steers and heifers closed 1.00-1.50 higher, instances 2.00 higher on high Choice and Prime quality cattle. A slight market improvement came at midweek, followed by sharp advances on Thursday. The noticeably higher prices are a welcome sight for local feeders, but the Northeastern market continues to trail the rest of the country. Midwestern fat cattle gained 2.00 this week, with closing prices at mostly 69.00 and 107.00-109.00 for Select and Choice grades. Also; Choice steer futures for the current month are trading over 70.00, but only a few of our (all black) high Choice and Prime steers were able to break that barrier this week. Local Holstein steers closed 1.50-2.00 higher. The slaughter cow market ended steady to 1.00 higher, with the improvement placed on the leaner cows (over 85 percent lean). Slaughter bulls sold steady to 1.00 lower. Supply included 51 percent slaughter steers, 4 percent slaughter heifers, 36 percent slaughter cows, 5 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance made up of feeder cattle.

NY Phil Frozen Eggs

ATLANTA, GA.
OCTOBER 01, 1999

EASTERN REGION FROZEN EGGS, OCTOBER 01, 1999. FEDERAL-STATE

Trade sentiment was generally steady. However, prices were unchanged to lower when compared to week earlier. Demand was fair but traders remain somewhat cautious. Offerings were adequate for trade needs. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending September 25, 1999 were 13 % more than last week, and 3 % more than the same week last year. Shell egg supplies were ample from regular suppliers.

ATLANTA, GA.

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was fair to about moderate. Offerings continued to vary in both size and volume and clearances, while decent at some plants, were disappointing at others. Live supplies remained at least moderate; weights were irregular in a range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were unchanged at 48 to 60 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. In the parts complex, buying interest continued to center on the well balanced to tight supply of bone-in breasts. Other items were at least adequate for the light to fair and generally selective buyer.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids were slightly lower as lack of fresh export news this week and some profit taking weighed on bids. Corn and soybean bids moved higher as traders position themselves ahead of Friday's USDA production report. Expectations for smaller production figures offered some strength to bids. Wheat mostly steady to 1 cent lower except Minneapolis 2 cents higher. Corn steady to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 2 to 5 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 5 cents higher.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

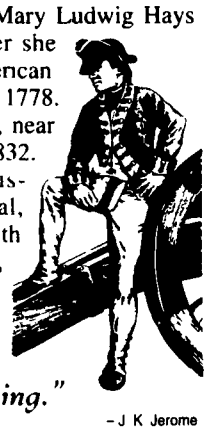
THIS WEEK WITH

OCTOBER 11-17, 1999

COLUMBUS DAY, OCTOBER 11.

A PITCHER OF RELIEF

Molly Pitcher was pensioned by Pennsylvania in 1822, and if you can say that three times fast, you're quick-tongued indeed! Mary Ludwig Hays was nicknamed Molly Pitcher after she carried water to soldiers in the American Revolution's battle of Monmouth in 1778. She was born on October 13, 1754, near Trenton, New Jersey, and died in 1832. A rumor that she manned her husband's gun is probably apocryphal, likely stemming from confusion with Margaret Corbin (1751-1800), another American Revolution heroine and the first woman pensioned by the government



". . . thirst is a dangerous thing."

– J K Jerome

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ To clean the surface of an iron, sprinkle salt onto a newspaper and rub the cold iron across it.

PICADILLO

1/2 cup chicken broth
2 onions, chopped
5 cloves garlic, minced
2 bell peppers, diced
1 pound ground chuck
1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce
1/2 cup pitted green olives
2 tablespoons capers
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
salt and pepper, to taste

Heat broth in a large skillet and cook onions until translucent. Add garlic and peppers and cook for another 5 minutes. Add meat and brown, then add tomato sauce, stirring well. Add remaining ingredients and cook for another 15 minutes. Adjust seasonings and serve over toasted rolls, Sloppy Joe style.

Makes 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If October bring much frost and wind, then are January and February mild.

If starlings and crows congregate together in large numbers, expect rain.

Dead nettles in abundance late in the year indicate a sign of a mild winter.

Twilight looming indicates rain.

OPINION

Hungry In The Next Century

By the time you finish reading this editorial, the world's population will have increased by the size of Penn State's freshman class, says a natural resources expert in the College of Agricultural Sciences Larry Nielsen, director of the School of Forest Resources says October 12 has been designated by the United Nations Population Fund as the Day of Six Billion (D6B). This is the day the world's human population will officially reach 6 billion.

"These people will need food, resources, and safe, healthy places to live," Nielsen said. "--For the first time, people are witnessing the tripling of the world population in one lifetime. The world population was 2 billion in 1930. Food demands will double in the next 20 years, yet arable land will remain constant The demands on science and cooperative extension programs to make food production more efficient will be enormous "

Not only will science and extension be on demand, the actual farmer will become increasingly important, if the world is to be fed. But from our point of view, the real problems to be faced will come from distribution and political restraints.

As important as research and extension is, unless farmers are allowed to farm, and food is allowed to reach the people in the world who need it, all the good intentions come to naught. Let's hope environmental restraints and land taxation obstacles do not cause the demise of agriculture to the extent that we all go hungry in the next century.

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Learn About Hay Assistance Program

On September 15, 1999, Governor Ridge initiated a $5 million hay assistance program for drought stricken livestock producers The hay assistance program has two components. First, 1,300 tons of donated hay and second, a rebate plan based on the $5 million allocation from the governor

The rebate program is for farmer purchased hay and long distance hauling costs. The rebate is only for hay purchased after October 1, 1999. Within the financial limits of the allocation, the rebate plan will cover $60 per ton for hay purchased in Pennsylvania. A $50 per ton rebate will be provided for hay purchased out of state. In addition, a $25 per ton rebate will be provided to help defray long distance hauling costs for hay purchased from areas outside

Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio Also, the Pennsylvania legislature is considering bills that will offer addition relief to farmers. Keep informed as relief packages are developed and make applications in a timely manor.

These programs will probably have short sign up times in order to provide financial help in a timely manor.

To Register for Hay Assistance Program

To be eligible for consideration for the Pennsylvania Hay Assistance

Program, you must be a Pennsylvania resident with a farm that lost a minimum of 30 percent of the crops intended for livestock feed including pasture as a result of the 1999 drought If you want to participate in the program, you must return the Livestock Hay Assistance Program Application to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) with a postmark no later than October 20, 1999

Completion of this application does not guarantee eligibility This program is for dairy, beef and sheep producers There will be a review of all applications to determine the degree of loss and animal units required for participation in the hay assistance program PDA mailed a letter and application to livestock producers they had on record If you did not receive an application in the mail, contact your county

Penn State Cooperative Extension office or call PDA at 800-423-6912 between 7.30 A M and 5:00 P.M Additional information is available at the PDA web site at www.pda.state.pa us

To Operate Generator Safely

Dr. Dennis Buffington, Penn State Agricultural Engineer, reminds us when using a portable generator be sure to follow these safety procedures. They are important for your safety and the safety of any utility company personnel working on the lines Report the power failure. Do not assume the power company knows. Turn off or disconnect all electrical equipment Place your generator and power unit in the proper position Be sure to maintain a level, firm base for both

Ensure the exhaust fumes are vented to the outside. Even small portable generators placed in basements must have exhaust fumes vented to the outside. Bring generator up to speed before activating a transfer from power company lines Use voltage and frequency meters to monitor generator performance. Connect electrical loads one load at a time.

Start with the largest motor first, followed by the second largest, etc. Do not load to fast.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BEYOND 'JUST THE FACTS'

October 10, 1999

Background Scripture:
Numbers 1:1 through 14:25
Devotional Reading:
Numbers 14:5-19

Perhaps you may remember Dragnet, the popular TV police drama of more than a few years ago. Questioning witnesses of this crime or that, the detective, played by Jack Webb, would frequently caution, "Just the facts" when bombarded with extraneous information. "Just the facts" became a popular quip.

'Just the facts' is one of the icons of our society in this information age. We believe that there are no problems that cannot be solved if we are in possession of the right data. But, although data may help us solve problems, often the solution may be dependent upon other facts that are not self-evident.

My college professors of business statistics, told us, "You can prove almost whatever you want with statistics." Facts are never as objective as they may appear to be. Just as on Dragnet the 'facts' sometimes turned out to be colored by personal perception and interpretation, so the facts of daily life may be equally deceptive and partial.

'TOO MUCH FOR US'

Look at what happened when Moses sent twelve men to scout the Promised Land in Canaan. The report of the spies—one from each of the twelve tribes of Israel—was overwhelmingly (10 to 2) negative: cancel your plans for the Promised Land; the inhabitants there are too much for us.

This negative majority report was full of facts, their recommendations were convincing and the twelve tribes quickly decided that they must return to the land of Egypt. Having come so far and survived so well at God's hand, they were ready to call off the mission and go back to the slavery of Egypt. We should not be too quick to condemn them; this was a majority report and we expect majorities to be right. Sometimes, however, we have to listen to minorities, even minorities of one or two.

From our vantage point today we know that there were other facts of which the ten spies were unaware. They reported exactly what they had seen—or thought they had seen. They were not evil men who gave a false report, but men of little faith who believed every negative fact they reported. What was wrong with their report was that their 'facts' were distorted by their fear which was greater than their faith in God. So they chose to trade the promise of the future under God for the painful but familiar rut that had been their lot in Egypt.

WRONG CONCLUSIONS

Near the turn of the last century, Milton S. Hershey decided to sell his successful caramel candy business in Lancaster, PA. His advisors tried to talk him out of it, but he was convinced that he should devote himself to the manufacture of chocolate. He also decided to relocate his factory to an obscure agricultural area of Derry Township, halfway between Lancaster and Harrisburg Again, his advisors told him it was not a good move. Hershey built his factory and the town of Hershey around it and soon he was on his way to becoming the "Chocolate King." Then, while the Depression threatened the whole nation, Hershey decided to build a luxury hotel and a school for homeless boys there. This time even his mother thought his plans were foolhardy. But Hershey went beyond 'just the facts' and proved them all wrong. The facts of his advisors were not wrong, but the conclusions they had drawn from them were.

Soren Kierkegaard tells the story of a wild goose who one day flew into a barnyard of domestic geese. Perching on the fence, he began to talk to them. "Did you know that you, too, are geese and, like me, were created to fly far and wide?" In dramatic tones he pointed to the sky and the glorious freedom and far horizons that awaited them if they would use their God-given wings. The geese were very impressed with this visitor and they began to long to be like him. Some applauded enthusiastically. But the corn was so plentiful and the barnyard so cozy and warm that when he flew away, they all remained where they were.

Moses asked God to forgive the people of Israel and He did. There were, however, consequences for those who had not obeyed God. They themselves would not see the Promised Land. God will forgive our failures to trust him, but there will be consequences when we choose to live by 'just the facts.'

You run a farm, not a test plot.

At Agway, we recognize the complexity and importance of selecting the "best" seed hybrids and varieties each year. There are hundreds to choose from, all with competing claims. Testing each one would be great, but we know that's impossible—you have a farm to run, not a test plot.

That's why Agway does the testing for you on over 100 Northeast and Mid-Atlantic test sites. Only after a hybrid or variety has been repeatedly proven a leader does it earn the right to wear the Agway name. MODEL 810 30 bu MODEL 812 43 bu

Uebler has been manufacturing feeding machines for over 30 years From our extensive experience we know exactly what you want in a feeding machine

SILAGE/HAYLAGE

Uebler silage carts feature a forage box unloading design which provides even-feeding of materials into the jumbo 12" auger discharge. Easily unloads all types of feed including the toughest silage.

Uebler silage carts come in two sizes. Model 810 holds 30 bushels and Model 812 holds 43 bushels. Both riding models feature easy turning automotive-type steering and a comfortable, adjustable chair. A convenient foot pedal or hand control engages the feed mechanism and an easy-acting hand control operates the hydrostatic transmission

Exclusive center pivot makes Uebler the most maneuverable riders available today. And Uebler's simple design and durable materials are backed up with a two year guarantee.

FORAGE BOX UNLOADING DESIGN

No need for costly variable speed unloading mechanism. Spiral beater prevents bridging – provides even-feeding of materials into the auger discharge. Easily unloads all types of feed including the toughest haylage.

MANEUVERABLE

Center pivot is designed into each Uebler machine by positioning the pivot wheels as close to the center of the machine as possible. This minimizes the turning radius giving Uebler the best possible combination of maneuverability and carrying capacity available anywhere

Dairy Alliance To Help Meet Challenge

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania's dairy producers face new and continuing challenges to stay competitive in a rapidly changing agricultural economy. Dairy Alliance, a new initiative launched by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, has been created to help progressive dairy producers successfully access the opportunities in this new economic climate. "As we move into the next century, the College continues its commitment that teaching, research and extension programming be responsive and relevant to the needs of its stakeholders. Through the Dairy Alliance, we will do just that to work with the Pennsylvania dairy industry to identify and address the issues both for today and tomorrow," says Robert Steele, the Dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences.

Funded in part, with monies appropriated by the Pennsylvania General Assembly in its current budget, Dairy Alliance will focus on enhancing the economic development of Pennsylvania's dairy industry through targeted education efforts.

To coordinate this initiative and develop dynamic educational programs, a core staff will be hired. The core staff will consist of associates working in the areas of labor management, information management and business management within the departments of Dairy and Animal Science and Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology in the College of Agricultural Sciences. There will also be key county-based educators working in animal health dairy business growth and farm management. The addition of faculty and staff with expertise in nutrient management will further extend the potential impact of the Dairy Alliance core staff. Programs offered through Dairy Alliance will augment existing extension and outreach programs.

The staff will collaborate with diverse stakeholders in the dairy industry to deliver educational programs to help producers take advantage of opportunities for future viability. They will look for specific ways to partner with private industry and supplement their existing educational work.

These collaborative efforts in all facets of the dairy industry will allow for high quality training for dairy employees, dairy managers and dairy agribusiness advisors. By expanding the skills of those involved in Pennsylvania's dairy industry, the entire industry will gain a competitive advantage in our global markets.

The success of Pennsylvania's dairy industry, the largest segment of agriculture in the Commonwealth, has an important and direct impact on the Commonwealth's economy as a whole. The Dairy Alliance can play a pivotal role in increasing the profitability and sustainability of this vital economic industry. The Dairy Alliance will help to retain, develop and recruit economically viable dairies and dairy support businesses in Pennsylvania.

The Dairy Alliance is important to anyone with an interest in the dairy industry. Education and information are the keys to success for professional dairy managers, and will be the foundation for programs offered by the Dairy Alliance. The changes within the industry are greater than ever, offering expanding opportunities for success.

Applications are now being accepted for core staff positions. For more information, call Dr. Lisa Holden at (814) 863-3672.

Third Generation Farm: Mil-Joy Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — A picturesque view greets each visitor as they make their way down the lane of Mil-Joy Farms in Berks County, close to the town of Hamburg.

Ernest Miller, the father, and Todd and Scott, the sons, are in a three-way partnership. The partnership is stranger to the Holstein circle, with recently released young sire through Accelerated Genertics, Mil-Joy Wade Vixen-ET.

The Millers farm more than 700 acres and employ three full-time employees — Ian Weimer, Terry Snyder and Nick Sattazahn. Uniquely, this is the third generation to receive testing services through PA DHIA.

"It all started back with my grandfather," said Scott Miller, as he began putting a milker on a cow in the parlor, which operates each day to milk 260 registered Holsteins on a twice-a-day program with a herd average of more than 21,000 pounds.

"Our technician is real accurate, dependable, understands her job, and is easy to work with," said Miller. "Same-day test reports such as the persistency report, overview reproductive, and grouping (milk-high to low) are tools we have grown to use."

Jo Ann Moser, a 19-year veteran of PA DHIA, provides continual service to a circuit in Berks County, including same-day test reports and milk urea nitrogen testing while being part of the only farmer-owned, full-services DHIA in the country.

PA DHIA ranks number one with the highest percentage of records being utilized by USDA. Contact PA DHIA at (800) 344-8378 to receive information or have someone stop by your dairy operation for a free price quote on PA DHIA services.

National Hay Association Elects President

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Robert Bishop, president, Bishop Hay, Walton, N.Y. has been elected the 105th president of The National Hay Association at its 1999 Convention in Pasco, Wa.

The National Hay Association is a trade organization representing 600 firms involved in growing, marketing, packaging, transporting, and exporting United States forage products. The organization was founded in 1895 by Willis Bullock, Canajoharie, N.Y. Bullock was publisher of The Hay Trade Journal at a time when hay was as important to business and transportation as oil is today. He saw the need to bring together business people to establish uniform trade practices.

Today the National Hay Association has grown to where it encompasses a group of professionals dedicated to the development and maintenance of domestic and export markets for the $11 billion U.S. hay industry.

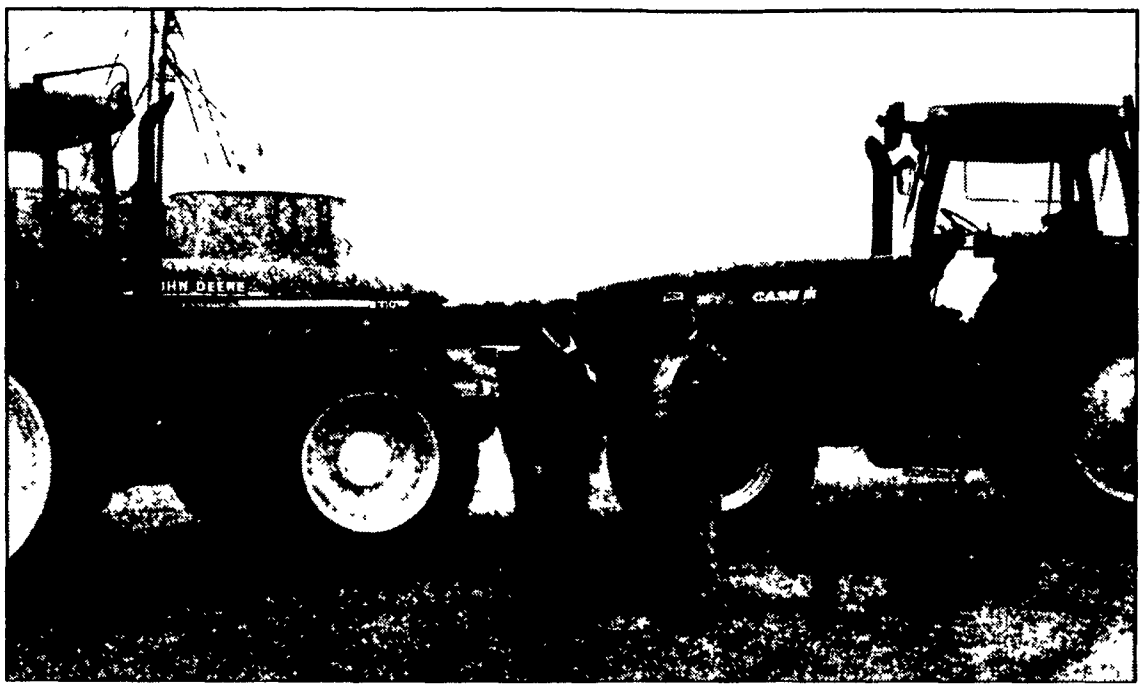
Bishop is the first president from New York State since 1954 when R.B. Dewey, Cortland N.Y., headed the organization. Lloyd Eldred, Jr., Auburn, N.Y. was president in 1966, but at the time lived in Honesdale, Pa.

The Year 2000 convention being organized by NHA First Lady Joyce K. Bishop at the Sheraton Convention Center, Saratoga Springs, N.Y. will be the first in New York since 1964 when it was conducted in New York City.

Bishop Hay, whose home office is in Walton, was spun off in 1984 from Kilpatrick Farm Products, founded in 1951 by Joyce Bishop's parents. Her brothers Norman and David still operate Kilpatrick Farm Products, dealing mostly in the grain business. In addition to Bishop Hay, Bishop Properties, Inc., operates a trucking company headed by Thad Barnes, the third generation of the Kilpatrick family to be involved. Bishop Properties, Inc., also maintains an administrative office in Denison, Texas. A third division, Leadfield Logistics, Inc., an international freight brokerage will be operational in 2000.

Other officers elected for 2000 are Robert Humpal, Fort Adkinson Hay Co., Fort Adkinson, Iowa, first vice president, and Rolland Turnow, Ohio Alfalfa Blenders, Inc., Toledo, Ohio, second vice president.

The National Hay Association home office, headed by Executive Director Donald Kieffer, is at 102 Treasure Island Causeway, Suite 201, St. Petersburg, FL 33706. Hay industry people interested in membership can contact him at 800-707-0014, email: haynha@aol.com. NHA's address on the World Wide Web is: www.haynha.org.



At the "one of a kind" farm equipment field day are the company owners who staged the event. On the left with the John Deere tractor is Ray Finch, Finch Services, and on the right with the Case IH tractor is Charles Hoober, Hoober, Inc. The friendly competition between the two organizations brought out several million dollars worth of farm equipment in one farm location.

'One Of A Kind' Field Day Staged

Billed as a "one of a kind" field day, hundreds of farmers came to the Lippy Brothers Farms located south of Hampstead Maryland, Tuesday, to see green and red, or red and green, tractors, combines and haymaking equipment competing for attention on one farm. The reason it was especially unique--two equipment dealers, one a John Deere dealer, Finch Services, Inc., Hanover and Westminister, and a Case IH dealer, Hoober, Inc. Intercourse, Middletown, and McAlisterville, got together in friendly competition to stage a presentation that included several million dollars worth of equipment, all in one location.

Unfortunately, equipment field days are at the mercy of the weather just like the farmers they support. And the weather did not cooperate. More than an inch of rain fell on Monday to keep the big machines and tractors parked in rows at the farm buildings. But the farmers came anyway. And the show went on, regardless. Tabletop displays from a large number of commercial exhibitors lined the equipment sheds. Brubaker Agronomics/Agway, Dekalb/Asgrow Seed and Monsanto chemicals, and Dekalb Seed and Novartis Chemicals all had program presentations. In addition, these companies were listed as providing informational materials and lunch: Bare Truck Center, Brillion, Central Mryland Farm Credit, DMI, DuPont, First Union Bank, Great Plains, Keystone Farm Credit, Krause, Land Pride, Mid Atlantic Agri Systems, Northurp King. Pioneer, Schulte, Telmark and Woods.

Tobacco Growers Eligible For Private Money

four cigarette-tobacco manufacturing companies. The MSA resolved the litigation brought by the states attorneys general.

A series of meetings, which began in mid-summer, were established to outline the potential side effects to producers as a result of the settlement agreement. Pennsylvania was effected in a large way — and growers could be compensated as a result.

John Yocum, director of the Penn State Southeast Agricultural Research and Extension Center near Landisville, told Lancaster Farming that he attended the second meeting at the Farm and Home Center on July 15. The compensation, he learned, would apply to any grower who produced U.S. Type 32 cigarette tobacco, including those producing the variety Maryland Type 609 — common to a lot of growers in the area.

According to the USDA National Agricultural Statistics Service, in 1998, Pennsylvania produced 6.27 million pounds of the tobacco air-cured light southern Maryland belt Type 32 tobacco with a yield of 1,900 pounds per acre. About 4.75 million pounds were from Lancaster itself.

The total amount equates to about 0.43 percent of the 1998 national production, according to the PDA.

Redding of the PDA noted that a sign-up eligibility form was mailed to approximately 1,100 growers Sept. 1. A second postcard reminder was sent to increase responses. A third mailing was sent this week to those remaining who haven't signed up.

So far, Redding has received about 250 responses, mostly from Chester and Lancaster counties.

There has been some resistance to the sign-up, particularly in the Amish communities. Convincing them the money is not government-affiliated has been hard, according to Yocum of the research center — home to tobacco research at Penn State until just a few years ago.

Yocum has assured those Amish that have notified him with questions that they can apply. "It's not government money," Yocum said.

"A lot of Plain farmers have called here, expressing their concern," said Redding of the PDA. "They don't want lawsuit money."

But Redding has assured them the money comes from a private trust.

Ten states qualify for the payment, noted Redding of PDA. The amount distributed per grower will depend on the number of pounds of tobacco grown in 1998.

The settlement applies to tobacco grown in 1998, Redding noted with caution. Those growing tobacco for the first time, this year, wouldn't be eligible.

The amount of pounds for the 1998 growing year would be worked into some sort of equation to determine the amount awarded. Yocum said that the amount could mean, on an average, about $2,000 per farm. The allocation would be once a year for 12 years beginning in 1999.

The total fund is $5.5 billion for all 10 states for those who grew U.S. Type 32, according to Redding. Pennsylvania's allotment equals $22 million to be paid over 12 years.

In a letter from the PDA to producers Oct. 6 this year, the PDA noted that Pennsylvania and 45 other states entered into the MSA Nov. 23, 1998. The MSA will not be effective until 80 percent of the states representing 80 percent of the settlement funds have finalized all court challenges to the MSA.

Phillip Morris, Inc.; Brown and Williamson Tobacco Corp.; Lorillard Tobacco Company; and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company funded the trust. Chase Manhattan Bank (the trustee) manages the trust, from where the payments will originate. The commonwealth will not compensate growers. The state will merely certify to the trust.

Growers have until Nov. 1 this year to sign up. A sign-up form is included in this issue. A separate copy of a completed IRS W-9 form is required, or, as per instructions on the form, you can submit your Social Security Number or Employer Identification Number.

For more information or to obtain a tobacco grower certification form, contact the PDA at (800) 498-1518.

Zurin Brothers Compete For Top Spots At First-Ever Holstein Feeder Calf Show At Manheim

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Manheim Community Farm Show had the help of the two Zurin brothers when they showcased their new expanded show ring facilities and the first-ever dairy beef competition Tuesday afternoon.

Todd Zurin won grand champion and his brother Adam reserve at the contest, conducted in the newly expanded show ring in the sale building at the fairgrounds.

Todd, 14, son of Gary and Judy Zurin, Mount Joy, exhibited the lucky "Shamrock," a March calf to heavyweight champion and supreme champion of the show.

Todd's brother, Adam, 12, competed right behind him, picking up reserve overall with the reserve champion heavyweight, also a March calf, "Bullet."

When selecting the Holstein steer heavyweight champion, show judge Ken Winebark from Myerstown said the big calf, at 657 pounds, is "just a really long-bodied, long-rumped, long-muscled type of calf." What gave it the advantage over others from its division was the "length of loin" with its overall "growthiness," Winebark said.

When picking the grand champion, Winebark said, the big calf is "really a very nicely balanced, eye-appealing type of calf." He again mentioned the "long-bodied" calf that had length of loin. "It's not as thick as the other calves, but is a very nicely balanced calf," Winebark said.

Adam's reserve champion, Winebark noted, with a weight of 605 pounds, had a "little more correctness, with volume of muscle the whole way through" when contending against the other division winners in the ring.

Todd is in the ninth grade at Manheim Central High School. Todd named the calf Shamrock, he said, because it was born on St. Patrick's Day and he bought the calf from Daryl Bollinger, Manheim, by lottery, the next day. Todd spent about three hours clipping and washing it at the Manheim farm show, and walked the calf about a half hour once per week.

Adam, in the seventh grade at Manheim Middle School, obtained the calf from Ken Zurin, Salunga. He also walked the calf once a week.

Adam also entered sheep and market steers at the Manheim Farm Show. He has exhibited sheep at the Denver, New Holland, and Ephrata fairs, in addition to the county 4-H roundup. He exhibited a purebred Angus at the Manheim beef show and plans to attend the 2000 state Farm Show with sheep.

There were 25 exhibitors with the same number of animals at the show. Following is a list of show placings.

Donough Brothers Sweep Manheim Farm Show Supreme Market Steers

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Though veteran showman Travis Donough had to wrestle with the calf at times, "Fireball" lit up the steer show ring Tuesday evening at the Manheim Community Farm Show.

"He has a little bit of a hot streak — he's flighty and a little on edge," said Travis, holding tight to the halter of Fireball, his supreme champion market steer, moments after he garnered the coveted Walter Heistand trophy.

Travis, 19, son of Ed and Larue Donough, Manheim, took time away from a busy second semester as freshman at Penn State to exhibit the 1,202-pound lightweight 4-H steer, beating out the FFA champion shown by Derick Bollinger for supreme.

Afterward, Travis posed with members of the Walter Heistand family as he held the family's memorial trophy, honoring a steer exhibitor at the farm show.

Fireball, an Angus/Maine Anjou crossbred steer purchased from Bob Rose, Crawford County, impressed judge Ken Winebark, Myerstown, in the show ring.

Winebark said he liked the "nicely balanced kind of steer," noting it was "pretty and attractive in its appearance."

Winebark said he liked the "overall correctness of design and structure of design the calf has to offer."

Travis, an ag education major at Penn State and a 1998 Manheim Central High School graduate, said he has won at least four champions at Manheim in the '90s. Though his dad purchased the steer group, Travis selected the steer himself.

Travis said he tries to walk the steer a couple of times per week, about a half hour or more each day, and a lot of time went into preparatory "work and wet down" before the show.

Travis' brother Ryan, 15, a sophomore at Manheim Central High School, won the reserve lightweight and reserve 4-H supreme market steer at the show. Ryan exhibited "Sox," taken off his eartag, a 1,152-pound Angus-Maine Anjou. Ryan has earned the champion title before at Manheim, he said.

Ryan noted that, as much as he can, he spends hours exercising and preparing steers for show.

Travis and Ryan have shown sheep at the Elizabethtown, Ephrata, Denver, and Manheim farm shows. They showed hogs at Elizabethtown and Ephrata. They plan to show at the state Farm Show in January.

In the showmanship competition, the family swept the competition — Travis won first in the senior division, Ryan the intermediate, and Joelynn the juniors.

At the beef show, there were a dozen animals and nine exhibitors. Following is a list of show placings.

Guernsey Becomes York Fair Supreme Dairy Champion

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) – An offspring of a long line of show Guernseys took supreme champion honors at the York Fair for local exhibitors Rutter's Dairy.

"Today is her day," praised dairy show judge and Maryland cattle breeder Bill Schnebly. "She is a tremendous dairy cow, walking on a good set of feet and legs."

"Rutter Bros Perfectos Yogibear" is scored EX-90 and completed a 22,000-pound milk lactation. She is due to calve again in December! Yogibear is a direct descendant of one of the Rutter herd's best Guernsey families. Her lineage traces directly back several generations to a 4-H shown by Cindy Rutter Johnson, who was at the halter for this year's supreme selection.

The York Fair's supreme dairy title includes a special revolving trophy presented by the fair in honor and memory of former long-time fair dairy superintendent M.Ebert "Bud" Rutter, one of the original Rutter's Dairy family founders. YogiBear's win also marked the first time the York Fair's top honor had gone to the Guernsey breed champion. Though dairy entries at the fair were down this season, with 211 entries, Schnebly praised the quality of the animals he had been presented by junior and open class exhibitors in six breed shows.

Noted by judge Schnebly as the other contender for the overall title was the junior 2-year-old Holstein champion, "Sunnybend Catrina Marker," exhibited by the Tom Boyer family, Sunnybend Farms, York.

Also participating in the final runoff for the supreme dairy honors were four additional breed champions each of them both the open and junior division winners. Nevin Hostetter, Dover, exhibited the Ayrshire breed winner, the 5-year-old "AK Patriot Jellybean." The 5-year-old Brown Swiss, "Wind Mill Hammer Colleen," claimed that breed championship for his brother, Nathan Hostetter, Dover.

"Admiral Peaches of Top-O-Hill," a junior 3-year-old, took top honors in the Jersey breed for Jesse Stambaugh, East Berlin. In the Milking Shorthorn breed show, the champion title went to Heather Crowl, Airville, with her junior 3-year-old, "Wil-Lou Irene 10th."

Manheim Fair Names Cow Champions

The Manheim Fair dairy show had reduced numbers this year with James Findley taking champion honors in the Milking Shorthorn, Brown Swiss, and Ayrshire breeds. David Wenger had the champion Holstein, and Andrew Dice had the champion Jersey, that went on to be supreme champion of the show. Wenger Leads Drought Relief Effort For Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Sen. Noah Wenger (R-36) and two colleagues early this week unveiled a $50 million financial aid package to help farmers recover from this year's devastating drought, and stressed that assistance is offered in the form of grants, not loans.

The senator announced details of the proposal at a Harrisburg news conference Tuesday with cosponsors Sen. Bill Slocum (R-25) and Sen. Joe Conti (R-10).

"It's estimated that farmers lost more than $700 million due to the summer's severe drought." Wenger said. "This package offers real relief to farmers by helping them recover a portion of their actual expenses lost from the damaged crops. We have a proposal that will provide relief to the greatest number of individuals affected by the drought."

The legislation would provide a total of $50 million in direct aid to farmers, with $25 million to cover losses associated with seeds and plants, $20 million for fertilizers and lime, and $5 million for hay.

Wenger said distribution of the grants would be coordinated by the state Department of Agriculture, which would administer the program based on self-certification of losses by individual farmers.

Farmers who suffered drought losses of at least 30 percent would be eligible for reimbursement equal to 15 percent of the cost of seeds and plants and 15 percent of the cost of lime and fertilizers purchased in 1998

The measure would also add $5 million to the Governor's Hay and Transportation Assistance Program to contribute to the purchase of hay lost because of the drought.

"Under our plan, many farmers who may have otherwise considered closing their operations may be able to endure this tough time and begin planning for spring planting," said Wenger.

The senator noted that the assistance is offered in the form of grants, while federal aid available is provided in the form of loans.

"Farmers shouldn't have to shoulder any more debt at this point," Wenger said. "This is real relief, in the sense that it doesn't have to be repaid."

Wenger said the money would be provided by the state's General Fund budget

York Fair Sells Champions

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — The annual sale of champions at the York Fair saw a "first" this year, with champion and reserve market pigs being sold by a sister/brother duo.

Amanda and Matt Hoover, East Prospect, took the grand and reserve market hog honors earlier in the week, then followed one another in the lineup of winners sold to a large contingent of buyers supporting the youth livestock programs.

Fulton Bank, represented by York Fair beef exhibitor and youth supporter Mike Firestine, made the final $4.50 per pound bid on Amanda Hoover's 264-pound champion Yorkshire crossbred.

Matt Hoover's 254-pound reserve champion, also a Yorkshire-cross, went under the gavel on a $3-per-pound bid to regional restaurant chain and longtime junior auction supporter Hoss's Steak and Sea House.

First animal through the sale lineup, however, was the champion steer exhibited by 10-year-old Kimberly Long of Airville. Buyer Rob Billet, representing Bill Campbell's Hoss's Steak and Sea House, initially made the chain's mark on the sale by holding out to claim the 1,265-pound beef with a bid of $1.50 per pound.

The reserve champion market steer followed, an 1,157-pound winner exhibited by Tammi Grubb, Hanover. Buyer was Delwood Kitchens, Spring Grove, at $2.30 per pound.

Senior 4-H'er Mike Burrell, Dover, exhibited the grand champion market lamb, a 105-pound Suffolk. Buyer of the winning lamb was L & R Enterprises, Dover, on a $12-per-pound bid. Burrell, in his final year of 4-H exhibiting, is a freshman at Messiah College in pre-med studies.

Jen Flinchbaugh's reserve grand champion market lamb went to winning bidder Engle Publishing of Mount Joy. Buyer Don Musser made the final $3.25-per-pound bid for the 120-pound reserve winner. Flinchbaugh is a Penn State freshman majoring in livestock/biogenetics studies.

A best-seller at the champion sale continues to be a traditional sheet cake, baked each year and donated by former 4-H parent and youth leader Lois Rankin. This year's cake, decorated appropriately with tiny livestock and popsicle-stick fence, was sold, donated back and resold 13 times, raising $1625 toward York County youth livestock programs. This marked the 16th year that Lois Rankin baked and donated a cake, which is generally donated to the youth participants to eat after the wrap-up of the sale. The cake tradition has raised tens of thousands of dollars during the past decade.

In the swine portion of the sale, champion and reserve weight class winners commanded over-market prices. Matt Bankert's champion lightweight sold for $1.40 per pound to Peoples Bank, York. Champion mediumweight was exhibited by Lindsay Jones and sold for $1 per pound to Godfrey Bros. Meats, York. Rick Jones's reserve champion lightweight brought $1.10 per pound from Pallet Outlet, Biglerville, and his reserve light heavyweight sold to Agway-West York for $1.30 per pound.

Cody Ault sold the reserve champion medium weight, which brought a $3 per pound bid from Feltch's Machine Shop, Hanover. Jennifer Shultz had the reserve champion heavyweight, selling to Engle Publishing on a $1.55 bid.

Weight-class winners from the market lamb show also sold well. Cody Ault's lightweight winner sold for $2 per pound to Dale and Cindy Ault, and his sister Molly Ault's reserve lightweight generated $2.55 per pound bids from the Crab Shack and H.C. Davidson Plumbing and Heating, both of Hanover.

Lindsay Jones sold the champion light medium weight to buyer Morrell Myers, Thomasville, for a $2.20 per pound bid, and her reserve light heavyweight went to McClarin Plastics for $2.30. Her brother, Rick Jones, sold his reserve champion medium weight for $2.10 to Wildasin BedLiners, McSherrystown.

Champion medium weight lamb was exhibited by Joseph Emenheiser and brought a final $1.20 per pound bid from Matt Sellers, Thomasville. Reserve champion medium weight, sold by Tasha Flory, went to Don and Mary Wright, Red Lion, for $1.90 per pound.

Steer weight-class winners held at above-market price levels as well. Jamie Welsh's 975-pound lightweight champion brought a $1.10 per pound bid from Ponder-

(Turn to Page A35)

Hoss's Steak and Sea House claimed the champion steer in the York Fair's youth project sale, exhibited by 10-year-old Kim Long. Representing the regional restaurant chain is Rob Billet.

Tens of thousands of dollars in support of York junior livestock programs have been generated through 16 years of cake-baking by 4-H leader Lois Rankin. This year's popsicle-stick-fenced creation was resold 13 dozen times during the York Fair's junior sale of champions, and raised $1,550 for youth programs. Flanking cake-baker Lois Rankin are graduating livestock club juniors Travis Reid, left, and Philip Baer.

osa Farms, East Berlin. Champion heavyweight, shown by Hope Long, sold to Godfrey Bros. Meats on an 80-cent bid.

Reserve lightweight, exhibited by April Daugherty, went to Hoke Mills, Abbottstown, at 82 cents per pound. Cory Thompson, with the reserve champion medium weight, sold for a $1.05 per pound bid to Farmers First Bank, Lititz.

Herman Hake exhibited the reserve champion light heavyweight, which brought an 82-cent bid from buyer Peiffer Nationwide Insurance, York. The Ben Druck Door Company purchased the reserve champion heavyweight, exhibited by Kelly Hain, with a 92-cent bid.

The York Fair's Sale of Champions generated more than $74,000 for youth participants this year, supported by dozens of individuals and businesses from within York and surrounding counties. KILE Conducts Annual Lead Line

Classy Ewes, Shepherds Strut Sheep Industry's Best

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In her first leadline competition ever, Bethany Tuhacek stole the show at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

Wearing a Merino wool fine-ribbed turtleneck, 100-percent wool pants, and a short coordinating oatmeal-weave jacket, the 17-year-old excelled in portraying wool at its best in the senior division.

With Daisy, a Dorset ewe by her side, Bethany excelled in three criteria considered by judges: contestant and outfit counts 40 points, control and presentation counts 25 points, and appearance of ewe counts 35 points.

Bethany, daughter of Ed and Kathy Tuhacek, is a senior honor student at Souderton High School. She plans to compete at Louisville, Ky.

Taking second place in senior competition was Angela Bowes, last year's KILE champion. For her final year in lead line competition, Angela modeled a wool pinstripe skirt, which she made, and a fitted ivory-colored jacket. She led a Dorset ewe.

Angela is 21 years old, married to Neal Bowes, and lives in Williamsport.

Third place in the senior division also went to another veteran winner. Andrea Musser, former Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen, is from New Middletown, Ohio. She wore a sophisticated champagne-colored pants suit accented with a leopard print scarf. Her Suffolk ewe wore a matching scarf.

In the intermediate division, first place went to Emmalynn Little, last year's champion in the same division at KILE. She modeled a stunning fully-lined gray blanket wool coat etched with white Jacobs sheep. Emmalyn's gray wool skirt and a wool knit turtleneck coordinated with the coat. To complete the picture, Emmalynn led her own Jacobs ewe.

The 13-year-old is the daughter of Kim and Jeff Little. The family raises 35-50 head of many different breeds including Jacobs, Cotswolds, Border Leicesters, Dorsets, Suffolk, and Polypay.

Second-place in the intermediate division went to Laura Anne Hunter, Cassadagee, N.Y. The 11-year-old wool a blue jumper, white blouse, and a gray-designed sweater casually tied around her neck. Laura led her Suffolk ewe with a matching hand-dyed blue halter.

Thirteen-year-old Morgan Firestine placed third in the intermediate division. The daughter of Mike and Martene Firestine of Womelsdorf is also a previous lead line winner.

She wore a pale yellow wool gabardine two-piece sleeveless outfit draped with a pastel-colored wool shawl. The shawl had been woven in a previous sheep-to-shawl competition.

Junior division winners were Katelyn Renee Melvin of Washington, Ohio, first place; Lindsey Beatty of Enon Valley, second; and Emily Sara Hunter of Cassadaga, N.Y., third.

Judges for the event were Janelle Berte, Lancaster; Stacy Taylor, State College; and Judy Moore, Michigan. The following criteria forms the basis for judging the 21 entries.

Ewe's Appearance

- Properly fitted.
- Alert and competitive, shows evidence of training.
- Structurally correct and sound, good representative of breed.
- Movement of sheep with the contestant.
- No handling of the sheep by contestant in the show ring.
- Tasteful accessories on sheep.
- Owned by contestant.

Control and Presentation

- Overall appearance of contestant and animal.
- Attractive and realistic representation of use of wool.
- Poise and ease of contestant.
- Contestant's approach to general audience.
- Apparent personality and cooperation as observed through general and brief questioning.

Contestant and Outfit

- Outfit appropriate for age, size, and type of contestant.
- Design meets current fashions standards, attractive and original.
- Colors and materials tastefully coordinated.
- Actual fit on the contestant.
- Acceptable construction principles.
- Wool content.
- Accessories included or applied in tasteful manner.
- Contestant made own outfit.

Joan Miller directs the annual lead line competition.

While modeling a tan wool coat appliqued with a snow scene, Katelyn Melvin, leads a Montadale ewe, for first place in the junior division. Lindsey Beatty placed second, and Emily Hunter, third.

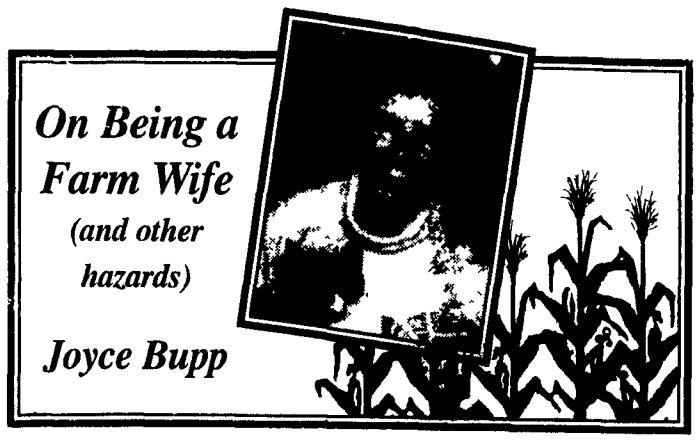
OMESTEAD OTES



We made it through Hurricane Floyd with nary a hiccup.

A couple of strong storms have come through since, and we never even saw an electronic blip.

But on this gorgeous fall morning,with the sun shining brightly and a gently warm breeze dancing through the trees, our electricity died.

Done.

Kaput.

The phones and the microwave bleeped in limp protest as it went, trying valiantly to come back on a couple of times. And the computer flipped off and on a couple of times before I could hit the shut-off switch the equivalent almost of a computerization coronary.

Leaving me with a dozen jobs to do. A few having to do with the chicken and rice casserole I'd just popped into the oven for lunch. (And with additional family invited.) Others having to do with needing hot, running water.

But most of them on the computer. Writing this column. Printing checks that were due to be in the mailbox.

Aaarrrgggghhhh!

Just the day before, a nuclear accident in Japan had reminded us all again of how vulnerable we are to power-related problems. To say nothing of the Y2K deadline inching closer by the day

So there I was stranded. Without my electronic lifelines. Even the coffeepot was empty of any hot contents. Now what?

Obvious first thing was to make sure it was power-service related. A quick check - using The Farmer's cell phone since none of our electric-charged, plug-ins worked confirmed that a repair crew was already enroute to the local power substation At least we were between milkings, the milk was cold and pipelines washed.

Not bad timing, all things considered. Except I couldn't get to the "Windows" programs I urgently needed on the computer. Highly frustrated, I walked away from the Windows shutdown. And went outside. Laundry on the line had dried enough to take down and fold. No electricity needed for that at least.

The schedule disruption allowed time to take in the view in lots of directions outside, each a "window" on our business and lifestyle. Heifers grazed the meadow hillside, heads down, busy munching away at the lush grass which has sprung up in the wake of one of our wettest Septembers ever Figures, doesn't it? After the Drought of the Century?

And behind them, around the distant hillside, curved a "window" view of alternating contour strips of browning corn and bright-green alfalfa, set against a brilliant blue sky. I had been too busy earlier to pause and enjoy the beauty, and give thanks for the crops and the heifers with which we have been blessed.

To the east, another "window," this one centered on a stack of corn silage, tucked in for the season under heavy plastic weighted with tires. Beside it, another stack of cured, chopped haylage. From this "window" the girls will be supplied with their rations for the next many months. I had neglected pausing to be grateful for full silos.

Outside the front door opens another "window". This one frames a pumpkin patch. No, I didn't purposely plant a pumpkin patch outside the front door We have been hauling to the front porch our surprising yield of pumpkins, grown between the barns despite high weeds and little moisture Several smaller ones have been carefully set around the lawn in front of the house, placed there by grandson Josh who adamantly insists I not disturb his "pumpkin patch" Having these little guys around has opened so many new "windows" in our lives

Before I had even caught up with enjoying our personal "windows, several beeps and flashing digital numbers announced that we were electrically reconnected with the world. I could go back to work on the computer's Windows

But it was the other "windows" that had really made my day.

Youth Want To Demonstrate Ethical Behavior – Let's Help Them!

As we approach the new millennium, it is a time to reflect on the past and plan for the future. Few of us will forget the tragic examples of moral behavior gone astray in our youth at Paducah, Kentucky; Jonesboro, Arkansas; and Littleton, Colorado. These are large-scale, national news-making atrocities committed by a few individuals. But what about the everyday moral character of typical American youth today?

The majority of middle school students, according to a 1998 national survey conducted by the Josephson Insititute of Ethics, appear to consider ethical behavior to be important. Three-quarters (75%) of middle schoolers said "It is important to be ethical in all aspects of life." Seven out of 10 (70%) middle schoolers felt "It is important to be thought of as ethical and honorable." Almost all (95%) said "It is important to them that people trust them." Most middle schoolers (92%) said "It is very important to them to be treated with respect." In addition, most (88%) believe "Their parents always want them to do the ethically right thing, no matter what the cost."

Yet, while middle schoolers appear to know it is important to be ethical and want to be ethical, they do not always translate good intentions into action. More than one in three (36%) admit they "sometimes lie to save money." Three out of 10 (31%) agree that "a person has to lie or cheat sometimes in order to succeed." More specifically, most (88%) said they had "lied to a parent within the last year" and about one in four (24%) was "willing to cheat on a test if it would help them get into college." About one in three (32%) said "it is sometimes OK to hit or threaten a person who makes them very angry."

It seems that age has a negative impact on both the desire to be ethical and the actual practice of being ethical. High schoolers gave more cynical responses to the same questions on the survey. Only 69% of high schoolers say "It is important to be ethical in all aspects of life." Only 64% of high schoolers felt "It is important to be thought of as ethical and honorable." Yet, almost all high schoolers (94%) said "It is important to them that people trust them," and "It is very important to them to be treated with respect (93%)." Fewer high schoolers (83%), as compared with middle schoolers (88%), believe "their parents always want them to do the ethically right thing, no matter what the cost."

Similarly, higher percentages of high schoolers admit to unethical behavior. About half (49%) acknowledge they "sometimes lie to save money." Nearly half (45%) believe that "a person has to lie or cheat sometimes in order to succeed." Most (92%) admit they have "lied to a parent within the past year." And more than one in three (36%) are "willing to cheat on a test if it would help them get into college."

Clearly there is a gap between what youth know is right and want to do, and what youth actually do. The gap gets bigger with age. A core belief of the Josephson Institute of Ethics is that character is not hereditary, nor does it develop automatically. It must be consciously developed by example and demand.

Parents have tremendous opportunity to help their children develop good character. The most effective approach to teaching children is modeling of ethical behavior.

While parents are the most important teachers of good character, various programs that promote positive character traits may also be available in your community. Character Counts! is sponsored by many 4-H programs across the country. Character Counts! includes lessons and activities that reinforce the six pillars of character: trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, caring, fairness, and citizenship.

Our youth say it is important to them to be treated with respect. Let's help them learn to give and earn that respect.

Expensive Fish Story

(NAPS)—Well-meaning, but apparently poorly-informed, environmentalists have succeeded in convincing the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to declare a fish they call the Alabama sturgeon to be protected as an endangered species.

Scientists however, point out that the fish never existed at all. Exactly three live sturgeon have been found in Alabama waters after two years of concentrated searching—and they apparently were Mississippi shovelnose sturgeon. Milliions of these fish are alive and well in Mississippi.

Unfortunately, the consequences of declaring the fish endangered could endanger human health and happiness.

When a species is listed as endangered, a map of its habitat is drawn up and it automatically becomes illegal for a wide range of activities to take place within those bounds. In this case, the area encompasses a broad range of the Alabama River, which is an important factor in the economic life of the region.

In fact, economists estimate that between 10,000 and 20,000 jobs will be lost, while the monetary loss could reach $11 billion.

Closing off the area would affect a number of industries:

- Shippers, and their customers, because the river is a major highway for transporting a wide range of commercial products.
- Farmers would find it a growing problem. They could face jail time if rainwater runoff from their lands was found to contain otherwise harmless pesticides.
- The forest products industry, which works near the river and uses it to move goods.
- Utilities—and therefore all business that need electricity—that depend on coal barged down the river.

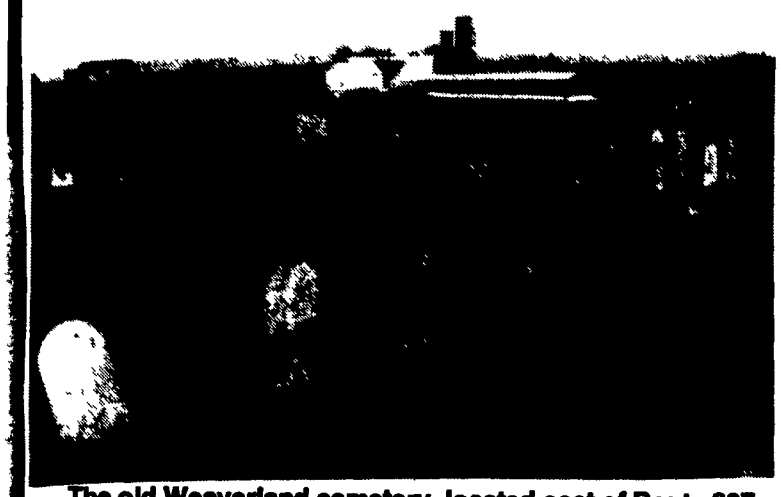
Martin Tour, Reunion Oct. 23

NEW HOLLAND — Descendants of the Mennonite Martins who settled in Lancaster County in the early 1700s are organizing for the first time a tour of sites of significance to early Martin history followed by a Martin family reunion supper. All descendants of these Martins and others interested in the pioneering settlers in this area are invited.

Check the phonebook for Lancaster and the northeast part of the county. Martins easily outnumber the Millers, Weavers, Zimmermans and Smiths. Most of the Martins are descended from Christian and Ells Martin and their sons David, Henry, Jacob and Christian who arrived in the New World from Switzerland and Germany between 1722 and 1732 seeking good land for farming and religious freedom.



The old Weaverland cemetery, located east of Route 897 in the Weaverland Valley is the burial place of the earliest Martins, and will be part of the tour during the Martin Reunion.

To research their history and document their descendants, Darvin Martin of Lancaster and Raymond Martin of Northern Virginia had launched The Martin Family History and Genealogy Project last year. Their computerized database already contains 19,000 names. They expect to surpass 100,000 names as Martin descendants find out about the project and contribute their part of the family genealogy. You can find some of these names, plus stories about the family ancestors, on the Internet at www.martin.simplenet.com.

To promote understanding and appreciation of the extraordinary pioneering spirit of these early settlers and the religious faith that motivated and sustained them, the two Martins are planning an all-day series of events on Saturday, October 23. The general public as well as Martin descendants are welcome to register for any or all of these activities.

Seminar: The Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society is sponsoring a seminar from 9 a.m. to noon where Darvin and Raymond will present findings on European Martin origins, Lancaster County settlement, and migration outward. Stories of their early life and faith will be recounted. Darvin will discuss his recent article in Pennsylvania Mennonite Heritage which challenges some traditions about Martin history. Gaps in information and future directions of the project will be reviewed.

Tour: the bus tour will eave from Weaverland (brick) Mennonite Church parking lot at 2 p.m. It will include the site of the original David Martin homestead as well as the home sites of Henry and Christian Martin and the early Weber settlers. The outline of David's 370-acre farm will be traced Homes of other prominent Martins, as well as several cemeteries, including the original Weber/ Martin family cemetery will be visited.

Reunion Supper: following the tour, at 5:30 p.m., there will be a simple Martin reunion supper in the Weaverland Mennonite Church basement. At 7 p.m. a 51-minute video describing the history of Weaverland Mennonite Church will be shown. Martins figure prominently in this church history.

Registration: For the morning seminar, register by contacting the LMHS (717) 393-9745. Cost is $8 ($10 for non-members). The expected cost of the afternoon tour is $5 per person. For the supper, people can bring a covered dish or dessert, or pay $4 for a simple catered meal To register for the tour and/or reunion supper, contact Elizabeth S. Martin, 433 South Kinzer Ave., Apt. 412, New Holland, PA 17557, or call her at (717) 354-6467.

New And Old Ways With Pork

Fresh meat — pork in particular — can be one of the best values in the supermarket. But, the meat counter can also be one of the most frustrating places.

With so many different cuts of meats, it's difficult to identify the cut and even more confusing to determine how it should be cooked.

The more you know about the cuts of meat, the more you can become a savvy shopper and know how to prepare the meat to bring out the best flavor.

Here are some descriptions of the shapeliest lean pork choices.

Chops: There are many kinds of chops: center loin, sirloin, rib, top loin, boneless or bone-in. Chops can be prepared by panbroiling, grilling, broiling, roasting, sauteing, or braising.

Strips: Pork stir-fry strips can be cut from any fresh pork cut.

Roasts: A roast is a large cut of pork from the loin, leg, shoulder, or tenderloin. These large cuts can be roasted in the oven, over indirect heat on the barbecue grill or stewed or braised in the oven or on the range. Any method yields a flavorful product. Roasts are perfect for planned left-overs. Cook a roast for dinner and enjoy the leftovers in sandwiches, salads, and pasta dishes.

Cubes: Versatile cubes can become sophisticated broiled kabobs or friendly braised stew dishes.

Ribs: Spareribs, back ribs, and country-style ribs can serve as appetizers or star as a hearty barbecue meal. Ribs can be braised or roasted in the oven or on the grill. Use slow-roasting or braising for tender, flavorful results.

Cutlets: Cutlets are thin slices of pork that saute or braise quickly. Flatten with the palm of your hand or pound gently to attain desired thinness.

Now that you can identify the cuts, you need recipes to make them. In addition to today's wonderful collection of recipes, you can send for more. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the National Pork Council, 1776 NW 114th St., Clive, Iowa 50325 or visit its website at nppc.org.

PEPPERED PORK ROAST

2-3 pound boneless pork loin roast
1 tablespoon garlic pepper
2 teaspoons dried rosemary leaves, crushed

Coast roast with seasoning mixture of garlic pepper and rosemary. Place roast in shallow pan in a 350-degree oven for 45 minutes to an hour, until meat thermometer registers 155 degrees. Remove from oven and let roast rest 5-10 minutes before slicing to serve. Wrap and refrigerate any leftovers. Makes 4-6 servings, with leftovers.

BARBECUED SPARERIBS

4 pounds spareribs
2 cups ketchup
1 teaspoon garlic powder
¾ teaspoon onion powder
2 tablespoon molasses
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce
1 teaspoon chili powder, optional

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line baking pan with foil. Lay ribs meat side down in baking pan.

Mix together ketchup, garlic, and onion powder, molasses, vinegar, mustard, Worchestershire sauce, and chili powder. Spread or brush ribs with mixture. Cover and cook for 2 hours, brushing ribs and turning over, 20 minutes. During last 15 minutes of cooking, remove cover, and brush remaining ketchup over ribs. Yields 4-6 servings.

GARLIC-GINGER ROAST

4-pound boneless pork loin roast
½ cup soy sauce
¼ cup vegetable oil
2 tablespoons molasses
2 tablespoons grated ginger root
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
3 garlic cloves, peeled, crushed

Place pork roast in a large self-sealing bag. Combine remaining ingredients in small bowl, whisk to blend well and pour over pork roast in bag. Seal bag and refrigerate overnight or at least 8 hours.

Remove roast from bag, pat dry, and place in shallow roasting pan, reserving any remaining marinade for basting roast.

Place roast in 350 degree oven and roast, basting occasionally with remaining marinade, until internal temperature reaches 155 degrees, about one hour. Discard any remaining marinade. Remove roast from oven and let rest 10 minutes before slicing to serve. Makes 10-12 servings.

Tip: Promptly refrigerate leftovers; reheat to serve with hot cooked rice or slice cold for pork roast sandwiches.

Today's pork isn't the meat that inspired phrases such as "fat as a hog" and "eat like a pig."

The little piggy went on a diet.

The hog of today is bred and fed by farmers to provide lean meat. In fact pork has an average of 31 percent less fat than the pork your parents and grandparents ate when they were young.

There are eight cuts of pork that provide less than 180 calories and 9 grams of fat per 3-ounce cooked serving. Compare this to skinless chicken thigh, which has 178 calories and 9.3 grams fat per 3-ounce serving.

Pork is also nutritious. As a nutrient-dense food, pork contains protein, iron, zinc, and B-vitamins.

The most important cooking tip for pork is don't overcook it. Years ago, people often believed you had to serve pork well done in order for it to be safe to eat.

Today, trichinosis is nonexistent in this country due to controlled production conditions. According to USDA, the organism, if present, is destroyed well below the recommended 160 degrees temperature recommended for a juicy, more flavorful taste. Pork may still have a faint blush of pink in the center. Cuts with the bone will appear slightly pinker near the bone when cooked to 160 degrees, but are ready to serve. Pork should be juicy, and the juices should run clear.

Create this savory dish with pork — the other white meat.

AUTUMN PEPPER PORK MEDALLIONS

1½ pounds boneless pork loin or leg steak
½ cup flour
1 cup sun dried tomatoes
Olive oil as needed
24 small mushrooms
1 large onion, minced
1½ cups chicken stock
¾ cup cooking sherry
¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
¼ teaspoon dried oregano
¼ teaspoon dried basil
¼ teaspoon dried thyme
¼ teaspoon dried dill
¼ teaspoon dried rosemary
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground pepper
½ each sweet red, yellow, and green peppers, julienned

Flatten pork medallions with your hand; lightly flour. Blanch tomatoes in boiling water for 2 minutes; drain and cut into thin strips.

Over medium low heat, saute medallions in oil 1½ minutes per side, remove from pan and keep warm. In a large saucepan, over medium heat, saute mushrooms and onion in 2 tablespoons oil 1 to 2 minutes. Stir in stock, sherry, tomatoes, Worcestershire sauce, parsley, and seasonings. Add pork medallions and simmer 5 to 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, saute peppers in 2 tablespoons oil and use to garnish medalions.

Serve over pasta or rice.

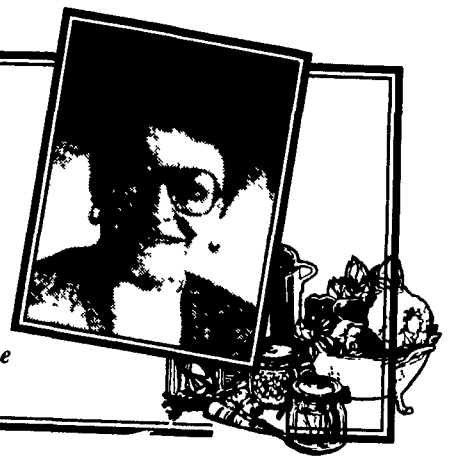
Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



Dozens of research studies over the last few decades have documented the negative effects of malnourishment on children's intellectual development. A grayer area is whether "marginal" malnutrition or skipping meals affects behavior or school performance. There is some evidence that lack of many different nutrients can contribute to behavior problems in children according to Linda Selkire, Colorado State University.

Sometimes, it is not only the missed meal but also the child's reaction to a stressful situation that continues. Without any magical answers, caregivers often have to deal with rambunctious and sometimes unruly children. The children may easily lose control if their needs are not being met. There are many causes of such behavior, including a desire for attention, overstimulation, lack of sleep, too much television, and lack of exercise.

Missed Breakfast – Common sense dictates that it is unreasonable to expect anyone to learn and perform work when fuel, in the form of breakfast, has not been provided. By the late morning, discomfort from hunger may become distraction, even if a child has eaten breakfast. The problem appears to be at least partly due to hypoglycemia (low blood sugar). The average child, up to age ten or so, needs to eat every four to six hours to maintain a blood glucose concentration high enough to support the activity of the brain and nervous system.

Iron Deficiency — Iron deficiency presents the best-known and most widespread effects on behavior. A lack of iron not only causes an energy crisis but also directly affects behavior, mood, attention span, and learning ability Iron deficiency usually is not diagnosed in blood until it has progressed all the way over to anemia A child's brain however, is sensitive to low levels of iron long before blood effects appear

Other Nutrient Deficiencies – Iron is only one of several dozen nutrients that can be depleated with empty calorie foods. Other nutrients may be lacking as well, and the deficiencies of those nutrients may also cause behavioral as well as physical symptoms.

Diets lacking Vitamin C, protein, Riboflavin and magnesium may also impact on behavior, according to Debruyne, Rolfes and Whitney of Life Cycle Nutrition: Conception Through Adolescence.

Protein-Energy Deficiency can lead to apathy, fretfulness, lack of energy or a lack of interest in food.

Riboflavin Deficiency may produce symptoms of depression, hysteria, psychopathic behavior, lethargy, and hypochondria before this deficiency can be detected by clinical symptoms.

Vitamin C Deficiency may cause symptoms of hysteria, depression, listlessness, weakness, aversion to work, hypochondria, social introversion, fatigue, and possibly, iron anemia.

Magnesium Deficiency may have symptoms such as apathy, personality changes and hyperirritability.

Zinc Deficiency may cause poor appetite, failure to grow, iron deficiency anemia, irritability, emotional disorders, and mental lethargy.

Should suspicion of dietary inadequacies be raised, not matter what the other causes may be implicated, those responsible for the feeding of a child should take prompt steps to correct those inadequacies by providing a nutritious breakfast each day

Pineapple From Zucchini

A popular recipe years ago called "pineapple from zucchini" is resurfacing.

The recipe for "Pineapple from Zucchini" has high acidity which makes it a safe product for boiling water canning. After assembling the ingredients, the product must be processed for 15 minutes in a boiling water canner. The final step is needed to destroy any airborne or empty container contaminants that can grow on the surface of the product

Here's the recipe for "Pineapple from Zucchini." Peel and shred 2 quarts of zucchini squash, add one half can (23 ounces) unsweetened pineapple juice, three-fourths cup of lemon juice and one and one-half cups sugar. Bring to a boil and simmer for 20 minutes. Pour into jars, seal, and process for 15 minutes in a boiling water canner. Use as a substitute for crushed pineapple in cooking.

ANSWER — A subscriber wanted a recipe to make a soft, tasty bread using both whole wheat flour and white flour. Thanks to Mrs. Nathan Wadel, Chambersburg, for sending a recipe for bread that she writes "rises high, never fails, and is very soft."

Honey Whole Wheat Bread

1½ cups boiling water
6 tablespoons shortening
4 teaspoons salt
1 cup honey or brown sugar
4 packages dry yeast
2 cups warm water
2 eggs, well beaten
5 cups whole wheat flour
5 cups white flour

Combine boiling water, shortening, salt, and honey, cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast with 2 cups warm water, add to the other liquid mixture. Add eggs. Stir. Gradually add whole wheat flour and white flour. Dough will be sticky. Let rest 30-60 minutes.

Pour a little oil over top. Turn dough upside down; knead 12 times. Cover. Let rise two hours. Punch down.

Work into loaves or rolls and let rise 30 minutes. Bake 325 degrees for 30-40 minutes. Brush with butter and cool.

Here's another recipe from Arvilla Keeny, New Freedom.

Homemade Bread

1½ tablespoons shortening
2½ tablespoons sugar
1¾ teaspoon salt
1 9/10cup water
1 tablespoon or 1 package dry yeast
1⅗ cups whole wheat flour
3⅗ cups white flour

Put shortening, sugar, salt, and water in bowl. Add yeast and stir into the water. Let it dissolve a few minutes. Add flour and mix. Knead by hand or with mixer. Grease bowl. Let rise until doubled in size. Punch down. Let rise until doubled. Divide into loaves. Knead a little. Put into greased bread pans. Let rise until double. Bake at 350 degrees approximately 30 minutes. Remove from pans.

If it is too sticky after adding the flour, add some more flour and mix well. Knead. If you prefer more whole wheat flour, add more and decrease the white flour by the same amount.

ANSWER — For the Pottsville reader who wanted barley and other specialty flours, check the following: The Baker's Catalog, P.O. Box 876, Norwich, VT 05055-0876 or call 1-800-827-6836.

Also Arvilla Keeny, New Freedom, recommends Dutch Valley as a source for specialty flours. In addition to finding the products in the bulk food section of supermarkets, the items are available at their main plant along 501 North of Myerstown. Phone 1-800-733-4191 or (717) 933-4191.

Kids Korner

KILE Kid Fun

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Some kids show sheep, some ride horses. Some kids tag along with their parents and just watch the excitement around them. Other kids come to compete in Agri-Olympics and the annual tractor pull sponsored by Evergreen Tractor.

It all happens at Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) held the first Saturday of October.

Participants received ribbons galore and lots of fun when they competed in sack races, wheelbarrow races, a laughing contest, horseshoe pitch, and a hog calling contest.

These farm-related activities, sponsored by Lebanon Valley Farmers/Fulton Bank, offer kids, parents, and grandparents lots of laughs.

In the afternoon, the Kiddie Pedal Power Tractor Pull held competition in divisions from age 3 to 12. Contestants pedal a tractor with a wagon filled with weights. Each age group must pedal a heavier load.

Some children practice for this annual event by riding their own pedal tractors on the farm. Some compete in local fairs and at events sponsored by tractor companies. But, some have no experience whatsoever before competing in the annual event at KILE.

Pedaling a tractor hauling weights is no easy feat. It requires lots of leg muscle power, concentration, and perseverance as contestants strain to go additional inches.

The prestige of winning seems important to even the youngest contestants. Taking home a ribbon or a gold cup serves as a reminder that KILE is an outstanding place to have fun. And it's free!

The crowd cheers as 4-year-old Ryan Bollinger pedals a full pull in the Kiddie Pedal Power Tractor Pull.

Kids fill the bleachers to watch a show by Sadie Green Sales play music on wash tubs and other unusual instruments.

Huggles the clown blows up eight balloons at one time.

"How does he do that?" is the unified question as kids watch Huggles the clown perform his magic.

Judge Dave Holloway, right, selects the grand champion hog and the reserve champion, both shown by Derick Bollinger.

Bollinger Continues Winning Legacy

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Is it luck, hard work or genetics?

Probably a bit of all three.

For the second year in a row at the Manheim Community Farm Show, both the grand champion and reserve champion swine was exhibited by a Bollinger.

On Monday evening, Derick Bollinger repeated the feat that his older sister Tracy accomplished at last year's Farm Show.

The Bollinger name has been a consistent winner in the years that Tracy, Amy, and Derick have competed throughout their eligible years. Other years, the siblings took turns having first pick of the hogs that are purchased from Ohio.

Fifteen-year-old Derick said, "This year I got them all — the good and the bad — because my sisters no longer show."

The gilts placed champion and reserve in the heavyweight division before being named grand and reserve over all.

Derick said that from the beginning, he favored the reserve, a 262-pound Durok, but knew that the 267-pound Blue Butt, eventually named champion, was also a good one.

On his parents', Eugene and Carol Bollinger's farm, Derick raises sheep, pigs, and steers for competition.

"I like pigs the best," Derick said. "They're easier to show than sheep and steers."

"When I see quality like this, I get excited," Dave Holloway said about the competition that included 120 head shown by 41 exhibitors. Holloway, who judged the show, is a breeder from Glen Rock and works at John Hopkins University as a technician.

Showing the lightweight champion was Heather Stallman. Amy Becker showed the reserve. The mediumweight champion was shown by Joelynn Donough and the reserve by Wayne Powell.

The medium heavyweight was shown by Ryan Donough and the reserve by Derrick Hanna.

Kevin Pfautz, 17, swept senior showmanship competition. Jessica Rohrer topped the 14-15-year-old division; Cody Drace, the 13-15-year-old division; and Brian Nolt, the novice class.

Kevin, son of Rick and Sue Pfautz of Lititz, is a consistent showmanship champion. He attributes his success to cooperative hogs.

Surprisingly, Jessica won her division in the first year that she has shown hogs. The 14-year-old daughter of Kevin and Audrey Rohrer, Manheim, said that she decided to show hogs because other kids said it was fun.

It was the first time Cody clinched the showmanship competition. The Elizabethtown teen is

'Ewes' Looking Good At Manheim Lead Line

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Rain did not dampened the enthusiasm of the traditional lead line competition at Manheim Community Farm Show Monday evening.

Scheduled to perform under starlit skies, the lead line competition is a crowd favorite for the hundreds who sit on the bleachers to watch the annual Farm Show 's Monday night event. Directors scrambled to put together a new plan. The logical alternative was to move the event into the recently expanded livestock show ring.

Although the area was not large enough to hold the audience eager to catch a glimpse of the stylish exhibitors and their wooly lambs, the expanded barn provided well-lighted shelter from wind and rain.

The competition was divided into three categories: senior, junior, and male. While wearing outfits made of at least 80 percent wool, contestants are required to lead a ewe. Contestants are judged on poise and presentation along with the control and appearance of their sheep.

Holly Hoover, a ninth grader from Ephrata High School, took first place in the senior division. The Reinholds' teen modeled a navy blue wool skirt with a coordinating tweed jacket, which she had made herself.

Second place in the senior division was Christine Musser, who modeled a jumper that she had made herself. The Mount Joy teenager led a sheep with a matching scarf.

Bobbi Bentzel, Manheim, placed third. She wore black wool slacks and a gray cardigan accented with a black scarf and beret.

In junior competition, Kelsey Binkley placed first. Dressed in a dark blue skirt and a Scandanavian knit sweater, Kelsey led a Polled Dorset ewe.

Second place went to Heather Zeigler, who wore a blue lambs wool sweater and coordinating hound's-tooth check skirt.

Third in the junior division went to Stacy Haines, who modeled a three piece suit. Her plum-colored pants, plaid blazer, and beret matched the scarf on the lamb she led.

In the boys' division, Radell Peters placed first and Adam Zurin, second. Radell, Elizabethtown, wore black wool pants, a Western-style plaid vest, and a black wool cowboy hat.

Adam, Mount Joy, wore a casual pale green lambs wool sweater and olive pants.

The judges included celebrity judge Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes; Debra Martin, member of the sheep committee for West Lampeter Fair; and Kathy Ermalovich, fashion designer and a former lead line champion.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

When I sit down to write this article, there is a bird pecking at our windows. For days, a mocking bird has been trying to get into the house. He has tried many windows but to no avail. Why does he want to be inside?

Our quince tree is loaded with fruit and we have propped up some limbs. I am thinking that the quince will not be easy to peel. But, it has been a tradition to eat quinces in the fall. My parents drove to Kutztown each fall to get some of this hard green, fuzzy fruit. And my grandmother usually canned some.

For a number of years, we have been traveling to Lititz on a Saturday to view a travelogue. We have often remarked that it is a "sea of white heads" as retired folks are the ones who have time to go to a travelogue on a Saturday afternoon. Sometimes we see pictures of a country that we have already visited. Other times it is one we will probably never visit.

When I think about it, I am amazed at the number of places I've actually been to—Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, England, France, Germany, Holland, Hawaii, Canada, Alaska, Caribbean and many states in our own country

I am very thankful that in the early 1700s my ancestors came to America. It must have been an enormous decision to leave everything that was familiar to go to the unknown. When my ancestor Hans Adam Shreiner came, he hunted for land, cleared woods and built a log house. Then he went back to Germany and brought his family to Lancaster County. In his will he stated that his youngest son, Valentine, should be "put to school to learn the English language." Our grandchildren are the tenth generation to grow up here in America.

Apple cider pressing is only one of the many different demonstrations that attract crowds during Havest Days held annually at Landis Valley Museum.

Southern Cove Power Brings Back Memories

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

NEW ENTERPRISE (Bedford Co.)–Putt-putts putted, steam engines steamed, and machinery from another era was set to work baling, threshing, sawing, and pulling at the ninth annual Southern Cove Power Reunion.

"This has grown tremendously," said emcee Tom Ling. Held at the old Replogle school on the hill above New Enterprise, the event has nearly outgrown the vast space it now occupies.

"It brought out the 'big guns':...folks like Jesse Clapper, a two-cylinder genius. He can fix anything," Ling says. "I only hope he passes this on to the younger generation while he still can."

"Rex Beach is another mechanical genius," Ling continues. "I doubt if there is anything anywhere he can't fix."

Pleased with the growing number of tractors, Ling says they had 150 on display up from 98 last year "We even had some real unusual ones such as the Leader and the Three Cleat Track."

Highlights included a blindfolded tractor driving contest, a bale rolling contest, and more than 30 kids who signed up for the pedal power competition.

It's a real community event," Tom explains. "Merchants often offer gifts for prizes before we have a chance to ask."

Working under steam power were a saw mill, shingle mill, corn husker, one of the first threshing machines ever made, and a Red Rover 2236 McCormick Baler.

There were gasoline engines of almost every variety doing a wide assortment of bygone household chores.

The Lioness Cub made bean soup and fresh apple dumplings. Cove Lions offered traditional sausage or hamburg sandwiches. There was also barbecued chicken and fresh cider as well as the ever popular Morrison's Cove Ritchey's ice cream.

This is the way hay was baled early in the century. The baler belongs to Michael Chenchoric of Williamsburg. "I operate it because he doesn't know how," says his father-in-law, Mervin Brumbaugh.

The Power Reunion has more then 100 members from all parts of Southern Cove. Friends and families attended from surrounding counties and states. The event is held each year on the third weekend of September.

John Karns of Hopewell and his prize winning gasoline engine.

Kids pedaled and pushed their way to success and an assortment of prizes at the pedal power contest held at the Southern Cove Power Reunion. Six and seven and eight and nine-year-old tractor pedal power winners were Sara Snyder, Samuel Shope (tractor) and Jessica Grubb. Standing, J.T. Widland, Kyle Brown, Paul Finnegan, and Marc Bollman.

Jesse Clapper (forefront) is a genius at keeping machinery such as this old-time baler running.

What Is Dryel?

The Proctor & Gamble Company has introduced a new fabricare-related product, Dryel. The Dryel product consists of a pre-moistened cloth, a stain removal solution, and a dryer bag to be used in your dryer for the purpose of removing stains and odors from dry-clean only garments. Dryel is not intended to replace dry-cleaning, instead it is used to "freshen-up" garments between dry-cleaning.

After pre-treating stains with the solution packet provided, the Dryel cloth and garment are placed in the dryer bag and put in the home dryer. Dryel effectively removes body odor and smoke from all fabrics with the exception of acetate. It did not affect color fastness, fabric stability, or appearance of the garment. Look for Dryel in the laundry care section of the grocery store.

AgrAbility Helps Farmers Continue To Farm

NEWARK, Del. – Jimmy Wells rolls his wheelchair down the ramp, stopping it by his pickup truck. he parks the chair and gently lifts himself up and into the driver's seat and closes the door. With his right hand, Wells shifts the car into drive while gently pulling on the hand-controlled gas lever.

Wells, 50, is a paraplegic farmer living in Milford, Del. He was in a farming accident 25 years ago and still maintains his 2,500 acres of land with help from his son Mark and wife of 25 years, Dawn. He says he is not involved with the physical aspect of farming anymore – he's more management.

"To be honest, I'd rather be involved in the physical part," Wells says.

With help from the Delmarva AgrAbility project, which is designed to assist farmers with disabilities, their families, and farm workers to continue to earn a livelihood in agriculture, Wells could become more involved in the physical aspect of farming.

The first program of its kind in Delaware and Maryland, Delmarva AgrAbility addresses disabilities such as amputation, arthritis, stroke, hearing impairments, multiple sclerosis, back pain, spinal cord injury, visual impairments and muscular dystrophy.

Ronald C. Jester, Cooperative Extension safety specialist at the University of Delaware, says Delmarva AgrAbility, which was started last year, will help to make the lives of farmers and their families safer and more productive By promoting independent living, the program will help farmers to remain actively involved in farming.

Wells says if the program had been available to him 25 years ago, he would have become involved in it "in a second"

AgrAbility can also bring assistive technology to the farm by finding the right adaptations for the farmer's particular needs. Some forms of the technology include a remote control or a lever extension for a door knob, control arms for improved and safe operation of equipment, a wheelchair on an all-terrain vehicle for improved outdoor mobility, a platform or chair lift to provide access to equipment and tools that can be used with only chicken feed.

"If you work with the men working with you, you get more done," Wells says.

Sally Van Schaik, AgrAbility case manager, says she meets with farmers and their families to assess the situation and to reach a possible solution.

"We look at what needs the farmer has," she says. "Then we look into house modifications, lifts or even hearing aids for them.

"The program is not only helpful for the farmers themselves," she adds, "but for their families as well."

"AgrAbility will allow farmers to continue their daily lives without giving up anything," Jester says.

And as Wells says, "You can do everything you want to do but you can't do anything you don't want to do."

Jimmy Wells is able to continue farming despite his injury.

Don't Let Planting Become Deer Smorgasbord

UNIVERSITY PARK — October is a good time to purchase trees and shrubs for home landscapes. But be sure you're not laying out a delectable feast for deer, said a wildlife biologist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"The deer population in Pennsylvania is as high as it's ever been," said Margaret Brittingham, associate professor of wildlife resources. "At the same time, as people are moving into rural areas, we're seeing more and more deer damage to home landscapes. Although deer prefer younger trees and shrubs, they'll eat almost anything."

As Pennsylvania's northern forests have matured and plant growth in the understory has declined, forests in those areas have become a less suitable habitat for deer, Brittingham explains Now, the deer population has shifted to urban areas "Since you can't hunt in residential areas, the population just keeps growing."

In much of Pennsylvania, there is a mix of agricultural, forest, and residential areas, she said. "This is prime deer habitat. Deer find cover in the forest, feed in the agricultural and suburban areas, and seek refuge in suburban areas during hunting season.

To avoid deer damage, the first thing to do is retain existing native plants. "These plants have already withstood the deer population," Brittingham said. "Many people get into trouble when they build a new house, clear out everything, then put in vast, expensive plantings of vulnerable young trees and shrubs."

Second, select plants that are less preferred by deer. "Deer avoid certain plants, like American holly and plants with lots of thorns," Brittingham said "In many areas, you can figure out what deer don't eat by walking into the woods and seeing the plants that are not browsed by deer."

Other woody plants that deer tend to avoid include paper birch, common boxwood, Russian olive, American holly, Colorado blue spruce and Japanese pieris. "But everything's fair game," Brittingham said. "It just depends on the alternate food supply."

"If you're in a high deer area, you definitely want to avoid plants deer really like, such as rhododendrons and azaleas, unless you're going to fence them," she said. Other common woody plants that get severely damaged include Eastern redbud, winged euonymus (burning bush) and arbor vitae.

Other extremely vulnerable plants include balsam and Fraser fir, Norway maple, Atlantic white cedar, clematis, Cornelian dogwood, wintercreeper, English ivy, hybrid tea rose, European mountain ash, yews and apple, cherry and plum trees.

"One of the best protections from deer is keeping the family dog in the yard," Brittingham said. "Dogs are a great way to protect your home landscape."

Finally, don't intentionally attract deer by putting out corn or salt blocks. "I once visited someone who had every tree and shrub fenced, and was feeding the deer," she said. "It makes no sense."

How Safe Are Your Children In The Farmyard?

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — Where could a child be most safe? A parent's answer to this question, typically, is "at home."

Parents perceive that the ideal situation is to have one parent at home to provide care for the children. However, what about parents who farm? How can they work and be with their children safely?

Isn't it best for the children to grow up around farm animals and activities? What is the best situation for them?

Nationally, about 100 children younger than 20 years of age die of agricultural injuries on farms and ranches each year. A study of 460 Wisconsin and Indiana childhood farm fatalities found that 50 percent of these facilities were associated with tractors.

The dilemma of balancing farm work with child care while considering the cost and availability of this care poses a challenge for many farm parents.

"Children need an area in which they can play away from the worksite," said Nancy Brehm, agricultural safety specialist at the National Children's Center for Rural and Agricultural Health and Safety, a program of Marshfield Clinic in Marshfield, Wis. Brehm is coordinating the first national effort to offer farm parents a plan to remove obstacles to safe and affordable child care. The three-year effort will be accomplished with help from a team of experts in the fields of child care, safety, and agriculture.

"We hope to have something in place by next year," said Brehm, "especially an introductory piece to justify why this issue is so important. We'll tell you how kids get killed and injured on the farm, and what we think you can do about it."

In the meantime, Brehm offers farm parents the following suggestions to help keep children safe:

- Set up an area in which your children can play away from the work site.
- Set up a physical barrier between play areas and work areas.
- Be aware that your children are continually changing in their growth and development.
- Provide supervision for your children, even if that means hiring somebody.
- Be especially aware of your children during "crunch times" around the farm, such as harvest season.

For more information about safe play areas on the farm or other information about the health and safety of children in rural and agricultural settings, contact the National Children's Center for Rural and Agricultural Health and Safety at (888) 924-SAFE or (715) 389-4999, or visit their web site at http://research.marshfieldclinic.org/children.

Bucks County 4-H Attends Penn State Leadership Conference

"It makes your teeth yellow and causes cancer," said Sterlen Barr, professional rap artist and health educator, who presented his anti-tobacco message to 4-H teens at the Penn State Leadership Conference recently

Barr's unique teaching style included original raps which captured the attention of the 65 youth attending the four-day event at Albright College in Reading

Under Barr's direction, 4-H'ers also created anti-tobacco raps and songs "Smoking Stinks" was a theme as the youth performed their "no tobacco" messages for the 4-H audience.

Barr is a Program Associate for the Tobacco-free Education and Action Coalition for Health (TEACH), Philadelphia. A Penn State graduate, Barr started writing raps as a way to motivate High School Students to be tobacco-free peer educators. He has been the MC and keynote speaker for the annual Pennsylvania Tobacco Prevention Network State Youth Conference.

Don't Wait For Problems To Appear Before Testing Water Supply

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Every person on the planet needs water to survive, but an engineer in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said consumers should know where to go for a water test, as well as what tests to ask for before taking their first sip from a new water supply.

"Many people only test their water if something is visibly wrong or if they get sick," said Paul Robillard, associate professor of agricultural engineering. "In fact, it's a good idea to test the water before or right after purchasing a house, or if homeowners have never tested their supply."

Robillard explains that the majority of homeowners using a municipal water supply receive water that already has been treated and disinfected. "Municipal water systems are highly regulated by both the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and the Environmental Protection Agency," he said. "Still, people who are concerned about the quality of their treated water should feel free to test as often as they like."

Most homeowners not served by municipal water systems use wells, natural springs or roof cisterns to supply their water needs. Robillard estimates there are about 900,000 wells in Pennsylvania and that 80 percent of individual water-system owners use wells.

"The individual is totally responsible for managing the quality of a private system," Robillard said. "If a home has a well or another type of water system, the homeowners should have it tested as soon as they move in. Some testing should be done every year, while other parameters can be tested less frequently."

Robillard emphasizes that homeowners should have their water tested by a certified analytical lab. Tests cost from $20 to $50, depending on what tests are needed.

"Certified labs use all the same water quality standard tests," Robillard said. "Homeowners should have an independent analysis performed. If you're considering buying a water treatment system, don't have the test done by the company selling the system. It's like having a second opinion done before agreeing to surgery."

At a minimum, testing of private systems should include:

• Microbiological. The presence of coliform bacteria (including E. coli 0157:H7) is an important overall indicator of water contamination. Yearly testing is recommended.

• Nitrate-N. Nitrate-Nitrogen, a common groundwater contaminant in agricultural areas, is a potential health problem when consumed by infants. This contaminant is both "conservative" and "mobile," which means it does not degrade in the soil-water environment and is efficiently transported in subsurface and groundwater flows.

• Total Dissolved Solids. This test is an overall indicator of water quality, representing the extent to which minerals and salts are dissolved.

• pH levels. This test can provide information about potential water problems such as corrosivity or aggressive water.

Nitrate-N, total dissolved solids and pH should be tested at least once every three years, according to Robillard. "More frequent tests can be performed if contamination events have occurred or if you observe changes in taste or odor," he said.

In most cases, homeowners managing a private water system will not be able to test for all contaminants that are regulated in municipal water systems. "More than 60 contaminants are tested for in public systems," Robillard said.

If a private well becomes contaminated from a localized source, such as agriculture, mining or suburban and residential activities, other tests may have to be done. "Laboratory reports will indicate that contaminant concentration in milligrams-per-liter," Robillard said.

"The report also will include a recommended public health guideline or maximum contaminant level (MCL) for each substance.

"Before you bring a sample of well or spring water to a lab, call the facility to find out how they would like the sample prepared," Robillard said. The laboratory may want to provide sanitized or pre-prepared containers. In addition, depending on the contaminant, they may recommend a particular sampling method and immediate refrigeration of samples.

"In only three weeks of using the Chi Machine, I lost 15 pounds effortlessly - and hospital lab tests showed that my blood cholesterol level dropped from 225 to 160 mg"

How do I use my Chi Machine?
* Place the machine on a rug Lie on your back and put your ankles in the grooves of the footrest on top of the machine
* Set the timer switch to activate the machine for the number of minutes you desire First time users should start with 2-5 minutes
* The footrest will begin to move back and forth, carrying your feet briskly from side to side This movement will carry up through your legs and torso, throuthout your entire body, causing you to wiggle back and forth - that's right· like a fish swimming in water
* All you do now is relax and breathe deeply, letting the machine rock you gently but firmly for a maximum of 15 minutes
* When the time is up and the machine stops, remain lying down for another two to five minutes, relaxing and breathing deeply, enjoying the remarkable afterglow - chi - as it moves throughout your body

"In two months of using the Chi Machine, my thighs, hips, stomach and buttocks now look as good as they did when I was in my 20's - and I'm almost 52"

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 20

The September meeting of Farm Women Society 20 was held at the home of Dorothy Crawford with Pauline Rinhart as co-hostess. Following the refreshments, Pauline read the scripture from Ephesians followed by the Lord's prayer and the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag.

The president, Valaria Ferguson, presided at the short business meeting. Among other things it was reported that a sympathy card had been sent and the roll call was to name a Carribbean Island.

There was a very interesting program as Shirley Graver spoke on Costa Rica. She told of the rain forests and explained about the coffee beans as well as the banana trees. The people who live there are very poor.

The meeting closed by singing "Brighten the Corner." Members will meet in October with Mary Shirk and Marion Hastings as co-hostess.

Berks Society 6

Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 6 met at the home of Janet Schlegel on Aug. 17. Bradley Fry from Oley Township Police Department was the speaker.

Members enjoyed breakfast at Sunny Crest on Aug. 9. The family picnic was held Aug. 22 at Mary Jane Hetrick's home.

Nine members were present at the Sept. 21 meeting at the home of Cindy Fick. Accountant Elizabeth Peiffer was the speaker. Janet Schlegel, Karen Hoffman, and Barbara Kelchner worked at the Heim Fest on Sept. 11.

Members are invited to meet at 10 a.m. on Oct. 19 at Sineis Restaurant, Mt. Penn, to celebrate Farm Women's Day. The annual auction will follow at Karen Hoffman's home.

Thanks to Kathleen Burdek, Bath, who writes that she stuffs tomato plant tops into old panty hose that she hangs behind doors and hides in corners. She writes that her cleaning lady will attest that this works.

Scott Bordner writes that daddy long legs or harvestmen lay eggs in the fall that hatch in the spring. All daddy long legs die in late autumn. The spiders are very active in evenings and late fall. To control them, vacuum inside as well as outside the door before the eggs hatch in the spring. Apply a band of insecticide around your house three feet from the walls. Treat moist areas and shrubs. Scott recommends Dursban or Penmethrin concentrate mixed in a sprayer.

ANSWER — J. Melvin Koser, Narvon, wanted Lennon Sister paper dolls. Kathleen Burdek, Bath, suggests he writes to Dover Publications, Inc., 31 East. 2nd St., Mineola, NY 11501-3582. The business has many paper doll books.

ANSWER — Jacob Harnish, Willow Street, wanted to know how to get rid of crickets in the house and if crickets chewed on carpet, wood, or clothing? Thanks to Scott Bordner who writes that crickets typically live outdoors but with the approach of cold weather they may come into the house in great numbers. They do cause damage to books, cotton, silks, wool, and synthetic carpets by eating large areas. To control crickets, caulk all cracks coming into your house. Keep off exterior lights since crickets are drawn to them. Inside vacuum well in all moist corners and apply permethrin around the inside perimeter walls and moist areas of the house. Home Depot and similar stores carry penmethrin insecticides.

ANSWER — Karen Wampole, Perkasie, wanted to know where in the Lancaster County area cribs and changing tables are handcrafted? J.W.H. makes these items. He has no phone. Write to him at 1335 Union Grove Rd., Terre Hill, PA 17581-9711.

House Committee Approves Miller Agricultural By-Product Technology Bill

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee recently approved legislation introduced by Rep. Sheila Miller (R-129) that would encourage the use and development of environmentally sound and affordable methods of managing manure and other animal by-products.

The Agricultural By-Product Technology Act will be analyzed for its fiscal impact on the commonwealth before going to the full House for consideration.

"I'm pleased that my fellow committee members acted quickly to support this bill," the Berks County lawmaker said. "Pennsylvania farmers must continue to look for ways to improve all of our agricultural practices, including by-product management, to remain competitive."

The development of manure digesters and other technologies that produce energy, pathogen-free fertilizers, animal feed supplements, and clean water will help farmers.

"Proper by-product management also benefits the environment because it reduces potential air and water pollutants," Miller said.

Miller's proposal requires the Department of Agriculture to evaluate new management practices and promote the education and use of those practices through grant and loan programs.

It would also create the Agriculture By-Product Technology Board, which would work with the department of agriculture to research and evaluate new technologies. It would be responsible for assessing the regional manure and by-product reduction needs and for encouraging cooperation among the agricultural community, industry, and local government regarding the use and development of the new technologies.

Dynamic Duo Spotlight Calf Sale

FREDERICK, Md. — The Maryland Shorthorn and the Maryland Hereford Association have once again joined forces to bring you the Dynamic Duo Spotlight Calf Sale here at the Frederick Fairgrounds, Saturday, Oct. 30, 1999 at 7 p.m.

The sale will feature approximately 40 hand-selected Shorthorn and Hereford steer calf projects, all with the potential to be 2000 show winners.

The sale will begin with two incentive drawings, each worth a $100 credit toward the purchase of any steer in the sale. All junior exhibitors who purchased a steer in the 1998 sale and who register for a buyer number at this year's sale will be eligible for the drawing.

This past year Shorthorn and Hereford steers have excelled very well on county, state, and regional levels.

Each steer has been halter-broken, dehorned, wormed, and vaccinated for blackleg, BVD, IBR, PI3, and BRSV, and must meet all state health requirements.

All steer calves purchased at this sale are eligible to be entered in their breed association's steer incentive or futurity program. The Maryland Shorthorn Association's Incentive program for the 2000 show season pays $50 to the champion Shorthorn steer and $25 to the reserve champion Shorthorn steer at the Eastern Regional Shorthorn Show, all Maryland County fairs (limited to one Incentive Award per exhibitor at the county level), the Maryland State Fair, and the Eastern National Livestock Show.

The Hereford Futurity allows exhibitors of champion and reserve champion Hereford steers at Maryland fairs to have their names placed in a lottery drawing for two cash awards. A new halter, provided by the Dynamic Duo Sale, will also be given with each steer purchased.

This year's sale will feature a Dynamic Duo Heifer Showcase area. Hereford and Shorthorn breeders will be displaying some of their top quality young heifers which will be available for private treaty purchases. All of these heifers were born after September 1998 and will qualify for the 2000 show season. These heifers will not be going through the auction ring but will be available strictly for private sale. All heifers also must meet state health requirements and will be available for purchasers to take home the night of the sale.

Purchases are not limited to 4-H'ers only. Anyone is welcome to purchase a heifer from the showcase area. Any member of the Maryland Junior Shorthorn Association will automatically receive a $50 credit toward the purchase of a Shorthorn Heifer in the Showcase Area on sale night.

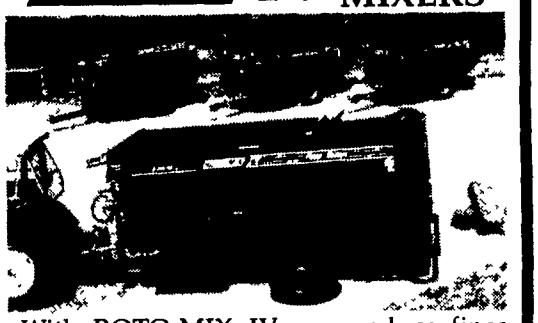
ROTO-MIX IV FEED MIXERS



With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling action mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

The ROTO-MIX end-to-end... side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

OUR PEOPLE MAKE THE DIFFERENCE

PHARES BRENEMAN,
LEAD TECHNICIAN, TRACTORS

At Hoober, Inc. it's our people that define Advanced Machinery Service. People like Phares Breneman, who has worked at Hoober for 24 years. During that time, Phares has repaired and serviced thousands of tractors for Hoober customers. Phares is a Hoober tractor transmission specialist; tractors are the only product line he services. And while Phares still continues to attend every factory school on transmissions, it's his years of experience plus his commitment to fixing tractor transmissions right the first time that makes him so valuable to Hoober customers. If you have a problem with your tractor, Phares can identify the problem quickly, saving you money.

Phares Breneman, an example of how Hoober's commitment to Advanced Machinery Service makes a difference for you.

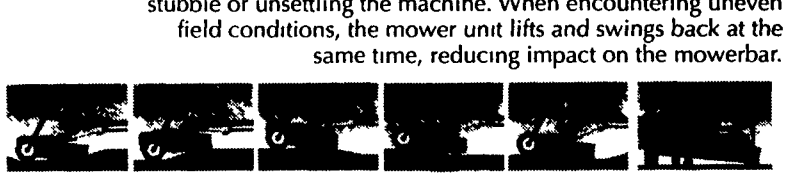
Wet & matted hay & stoney fields?? VICON cuts less than an inch from ground & floats over stones, making hay mowing a breeze!

DISC MOWER CONDITIONERS

Free Float Suspension System
The overhead frame design with the mower suspended by links and coil springs allows cutting close to the ground. The mower floats over uneven ground contours without damaging the stubble or unsettling the machine. When encountering uneven field conditions, the mower unit lifts and swings back at the same time, reducing impact on the mowerbar.



2 yr. Warranty on Cutter Bar

CUTTING CLOSE TO THE GROUND WITH THE VICON'S FREE FLAT SUSPENSION SYSTEM

Vicon finger or roller type trailed mower conditioners combine a superb cut with an excellent conditioning performance. The full swivel hitch allows mowing and conditioning non-stop around the tightest corners and free float suspension system guarantees perfectly matched high capacity

No other machine on the market can match the performance or features of the Vicon KMR machine

Top Producers Choose Knight!

Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

JAY•LOR®

Putting The "Total" into TMR

THE JAY•LOR VERTICAL FEED MIXER OPENS NEW HORIZONS IN YOUR FEEDING PROGRAM, OFFERING CHOICES AND OPTIONS THAT CONVENTIONAL MIXERS CANNOT MATCH.

With the ability to handle bales of any size and moisture content, the JAY•LOR puts the "Total" into T.M.R. Virtually all feedstuffs, including corn silage, haylage, grains, and concentrates are gently cut and mixed into a palatable total mixed ration. JAY•LOR mixers are designed with few moving parts, utilitizing heavy duty components.

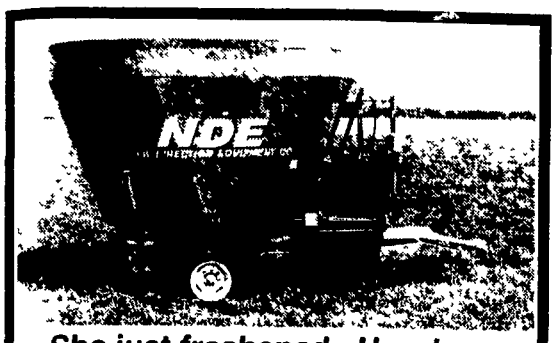
JOHN DEERE HARDI KUHN BUSH HOG® YANMAR NEW HOLLAND



She just freshened - How long until she reaches her peak?

Reduce the chance of milk fevers and DA's by targeting each ration to each group of cows. The NDA Vertical Mixer will allow you to cut and blend long-stemmed hay (large or small, round or square bales) with all other feed stuffs, making a palatable, easily digestible ration for your just-fresh cows. By starting with lots of hay in the mix, then gradually reducing the hay until they are on full feed, you will get them to peak production faster, and improve your bottom line.

CONTROLLING LISTERIA MONOCYTOGENES IN READY-TO-EAT MEAT AND POULTRY PRODUCTS

Stephen J. Knabel
Associate Professor
Food Science

A recent large outbreak of listeriosis associated with the consumption of hot dogs resulted in numerous illnesses and deaths, the recall of 35 million pounds of product, multimillion dollar lawsuits, and a significant loss of business.

The outbreak, along with numerous recalls, has rekindled concern about Listeria monocytogenes in ready-to-eat meat and poultry products among industry, government, academia and consumers.

The type of L. monocytogenes that was isolated from both the offending product and people with listeriosis was a rather rare "E Type" of L. monocytogenes that was detected by researchers at Cornell University. The source of these bacteria was thought to be an overhead air conditioning unit that was dismantled in the plant in question just prior to the outbreak occurring.

The outbreak has caused the USDA to reemphasize their zero tolerance policy for L. monocytogenes in ready-to-eat meats. They have asked meat processing plants to reassess their HACCP (Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point) plans to make sure they are controlling L. monocytogenes in their products "IF IT IS DETERMINED TO BE A HAZARD THAT IS REASONABLY LIKELY TO OCCUR." In addition, they are promoting more environmental and product testing for L. monocytogenes by the industry.

Many meat processors are testing for Listeria genus in environmental, but not product samples to avoid possible liability issues if the species L. monocytogenes is found. Any sites that are positive for Listeria genus may contain L. monocytogenes and thus should be investigated and cleaned and sanitized immediately to remove any L. monocytogenes that may have been present.

Listeria monocytogenes are foodborne pathogens that are widespread in the environment, grow at refrigeration temperatures, and cause death in about 30 percent of those afflicted with listeriosis. Illness usually occurs in those individuals that are immunocompromised (infants, elderly, AIDS patients, and cancer patients).

Listeria monocytogenes are destroyed during proper cooking (160 degrees Fahrenheit) of ready-to-eat meats, such as hot dogs, but can contaminate these products after the casing is removed and before the product is packaged. The organism can grow rapidly in ready-to-eat meats such as hot dogs and luncheon meats, and reach very high levels if the products are temperature-abused. Even if these products are held at proper refrigeration temperatures (at or below 40 degrees Fahrenheit), there is the potential for slow growth over the long shelf life of these types of products (60-90 days), which can result in very high and dangerous levels of L. monocytogenes. The environment inside vacuum-packaged ready-to-eat meats (cold, moist, salty, and with high nutrients, with few other microbial competitors) appears to be ideal for the growth of L. monocytogenes.

Measures for controlling L. monocytogenes in ready-to-eat meats include:

1) Thorough cooking to 160 degrees Fahrenheit to insure complete destruction of L. monocytogenes present in the raw meat.

2) Isolation of the packaging area from all other areas in the plant, especially raw meat areas (note L. monocytogenes is a common contaminant on raw poultry).

3) Strict cleaning and sanitizing of all surfaces in the isolated packaging area, especially food contact surfaces. (Note: L. monocytogenes can hide in porous, rough, pitted equipment — making their removal by cleaning and sanitizing all but impossible. Therefore, check all food contact equipment to make sure the surfaces are cleanable!)

4) Prevention of cross-contamination from non-food contact surfaces to the product or food contact surfaces (this includes preventing contamination from sealing condensation, workers, tubs, floors, walls, contaminated air, etc.). Be sure that only designated workers have access to the packaging room and that they adhere to strict sanitary guidelines, including the proper use of sanitary gloves when handling the product. Note: Listeria monocytogenes loves moist areas, so be sure to clean and sanitize these areas (drains, etc.) in the packaging room daily. Remember, microorganisms need four things to reach high levels — food, moisture, time, and temperature.

5) Another line of defense is preventing any organisms that may have gotten into the package from growing. Low refrigeration temperatures (less than 35 degrees Fahrenheit) will dramatically slow down the growth of L. monocytogenes; therefore, keep the temperature in your packaging and product storage rooms as low as possible when the product is in your control and encourage your customers to do the same. Research is also under way at many universities, including Penn State, to determine what ingredients might be added to ready-to-eat meats to inhibit the growth of L. monocytogenes in these products.

6) Research is also under way to develop post-packaging processes that will destroy L. monocytogenes in the package. The two most promising technologies appear to be heat and irradiation. Approval for heat treatment and irradiation of vacuum-packaged ready-to-eat meats is currently being sought.

7) Finally, remember, prevention is the key; however, you need to have a recall plan in place just in case the worst (an outbreak) does happen. If the worst happens, act rapidly and honestly. Don't wait until it happens; instead, act now to prevent!

To paraphrase an old saying: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound (or should we say 35 million pounds and perhaps billions of dollars!) of cure!"

State 4-H Horse Show Set For Harrisburg

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 40th Annual Pennsylvania State 4-H Horse Show will be conducted here at the Farm Show Complex Oct. 8-10.

More than 800 4-H members from more than 60 counties are expected to participate in this year's show, competing in 42 performance and about 80 production classes.

The state show is the final competition of the year for 4-H horse club members enrolled in performance and production projects. To be eligible for the show, members must advance through qualifying competitions at county, regional and district levels. Events include halter, showmanship, equitation, pleasure, jumping, driving, reining, western riding and timed events. A therapeutic riding division for riders with disabilities also is included.

Highlights of the weekend will include the Recognition Ceremony held on Saturday, Oct. 9, and the presentation of the 1999 Pennsylvania 4-H Horse Program Outstanding Member awards, the Equine Educational Exhibit awards, and the Good Housekeeping awards.

Other activities include county educational exhibits, commercial exhibits, displays, and educational seminars. A dance for exhibitors and 4-H members will be Friday evening.

The first State 4-H Model Horse Show will be Friday, Oct. 8, at 11 a.m. in the Farm Show Complex Small Arena. The show will provide an opportunity for any 4-H members to learn and perfect the hobby of collecting and showing model horses. Participants learn about principles of collecting, breeds of horses, tack and equipment, and horse shows. The event is ideal for members who may not be able to own or show live horses.

The State 4-H Horse Show begins daily at 8 a.m. Evening performances begin at 8 p.m. on Friday and at 7 p.m. on Saturday.

Approximately 7,000 youth are enrolled in 4-H horse projects in Pennsylvania. These programs are designed to help young people develop life skills and knowledge of horse production, use, and management.

For more information on the show or on 4-H horse programs in Pennsylvania, contact your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

Insecticide Effective Against Worm Pests

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Growers of head lettuce, celery, and head and stem brassicca crops now have an innovative way to protect their crops specifically from lepidopteran larvae (worm pests).

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has registered Proclaim® 5SG insecticide from Novartis Crop Protection, Inc. Registration is pending in Arizona. Proclaim is not registered for use in California and New York.

Research shows that the active ingredient in Proclaim, emamectin benzoate, delivers consistently excellent control of a broad range of worm pests at very low use rates of 0.0075 to 0 015 pound active ingredient per acre. Rates of formulated product are 2.4 to 4.8 ounces per acre.

On-farm trials confirm that Proclaim can improve quality and yield. Kevin Short, an independent consultant based in Sarasota, Fla., has tested Proclaim in cole crops. He reports that fields treated with Proclaim yielded "100 percent marketable cabbage compared to a standard carbamate and pyrethroid program with only 75 percent to 80 percent marketability. This is the kind of production loss that growers have faced the past few years," he said.

Wing Chong, a vegetable grower in Loxahatchee, Fla., participated in a Proclaim demonstration trial on his Napa cabbage in 1998 Heavy worm pressure was causing Chong to spray every five to seven days with no results "Some of the chemicals we had been using were no longer effective, especially against the diamondback moth," Chong said

"We had been using another insecticide every seven days. Then, we were forced to spray every five days. The worm pressure was becoming worse every day, but the Proclaim plots looked very good."

Emamectin benzoate is a synthetically modified form of abamectin, the active ingredient in Agri-Mek®. Because Proclaim specifically controls worm pests, it provides an important alternative where such pests as diamondback moth and beet armyworm have developed insensitivity to commonly used, broad-spectrum insecticides Proclaim has already been used under Section 18 Emergency Exemptions in 1996 and 1997 against resistant diamondback moth in Hawaiian cole crops Proclaim helped reduce crop losses by nearly $1 million per year in Hawaii.

Finally, a proven way to beat hoof disease!

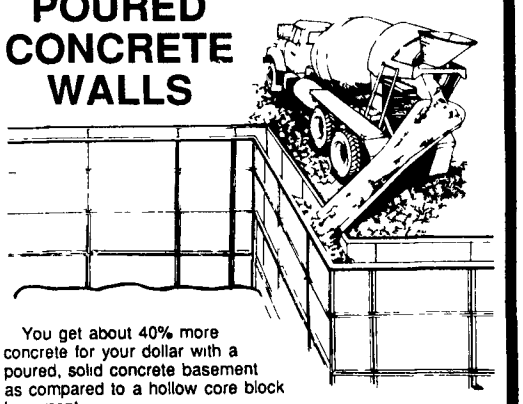
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21ST CENTURY?

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Everlast Roofing

Everlast II is galvanized heavier like old times; it is heat formed to prevent paint cracks; it is cut while hot to prevent early edge rust; Everlast paint is harder so it won't scratch as easy; won't bend or buckle as easy because of stronger design; laps are tighter and virtually invisible; nails/screws seal better because ribs fit tighter to fastener heads; zinc phosphate is used under paint which is much better than the chromate most competitors use. Crisp and attractive Sharp colors. Excellent for houses and barns. Double dipped galvanized is proven best for animals. Standing seam is ideal for houses. Low prices, fast delivery

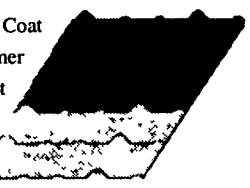
Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process

"The Best"

1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3. Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4. G-100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6. Heat formed, less paint cracks



7.
Everlast II

NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention

2 Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion

3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment. This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider

4 G-100 Galvanized: Most metal roofing has approx. 40% less galvanized under the paint. G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels.

5 Full Hard: Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc.

6 Heat formed. Metal is painted before ribs are formed. Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)

7 Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F

8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L.F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$46.74 PER SQUARE
$1.48 PER LINEAL FT.

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!

New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40

An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

Corn Can Be Used For 'Entertainment' Farming, Too

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — Sometimes corn has a lot more uses than you can imagine.

You know the standard uses — corn flakes, beverage sweetener, alternative combustion fuel, and others.

But there are more uses than you might have read about — and that includes, of all things, entertainment farming.

Why not make a show out of the front five acres? That's exactly what Cherry-Crest Farm, operated by Jack and Donna Coleman in Paradise, did. This year marked the fourth time in a row that the Coleman's put up the "World's Largest Attended Maze," in which every year a new "theme" for the corn maze is selected.

The maze, taking up five acres, was planted in the shape of the Keystone State itself, complete with the four cities making up the corners (Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Erie, and Scranton- Wilkes Barre). In the center is the shape of the Liberty Bell, along with ribbons along the corn row "paths" of the maze painted a different color to represent a section of the maze (yellow for the Liberty Bell, green for the state outline, red the Paradise Star, and white the stars of the major cities).

The "Land of Liberty" theme proved especially attractive for area tourists. Each day during the season the maze averaged about 1,200-1,500 visitors. Last year about 50,000 visitors showed up to tour the maze, in the shape of Noah's Ark. The first year the maze was laid out in the shape of a locomotive and the second year, a horse and buggy.

At the top of the maze, north of the "gameboard," was an America flag made up of 14,000 petunias. According to Coleman, the one-third acre flag was planted the third week of May this year, contracted with Good Harvest, Strasburg.

The corn maze itself, which opened July 2, was planted with Pioneer 32K62, a Bt hybrid, full season variety. The corn was planted May 5 in 30-inch rows. The maze theme outline was gridded out and, when the corn was less than eight inches tall, a crew worked a hoe to shape. A few aerial photographs were taken before the final shape could be finished.

The drought emergency this year had an effect on some of the tourists, but luckily, according to Coleman, enough rain had fallen. In mid-July, two irrigations were needed to keep the corn stalks from turning brown and brittle.

The maze employs about 15, mostly youth, from around the region. The Colemans also care for 60 cows on their dairy, in addition to 50,000 broilers under contract with Tyson.

The maze is open Sept. 3 through Sept. 18 Friday and

The maze included an extensive petting zoo, mini-mazes, hay rides, food, refreshments, gift shop, and weekly special events. This year the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association and Penn State Extension Service also had a corn products stand at the maze. AN END TO A VERY LONG YEAR

I'm sure the 1999 growing season had as many days and hours as previous seasons, but for many of us it sure seemed like a longer than normal year.

For many, Mother Nature threw a few curveballs that resulted in some dreadful corn crops being produced around the state.

Fortunately, this kind of season is a rare occurrence that we hope does not reoccur for the remainder of your careers.

I thought I might be good to revisit a few of the issues we ran into this summer and

Know Dangerous Weeds, Learn To Control Them

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Not only are weeds a hindrance to good corn yields, but some can be downright dangerous to farm animals.

And it's not always good to have the weeds as part of silage, including purple nightshade, which could kill a horse if enough is eaten. And Jimsonweed is a toxic weed with hallucinogenic properties, according to Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County (ELANCO) School District Adult Farmer Program adviser.

Stoltzfus spoke to about 60 farmer and agri-industry representatives in June during the third annual ELANCO Adult Farmer Program Spring Meeting at the Eugene Martin Farm south of New Holland.

"It's critical to know what weeds we're after when using herbicides," said Stoltzfus.

During the tour of corn herbicide test plots at the farm, Stoltzfus held up a variety of weeds, including giant ragweed, nightshade, ragweed, Jimsonweed, and others.

Some, like ragweed, can be controlled with atrazine. Others demand different approaches.

But timing can be critical. Even now, producers should be looking into ways to control weeds for next year. Post applications can be sufficient in some cases.

"Fall is the best time to get those perennials, when they're trying to store up energy for the winter," he told the tour group. Unfortunately, Stoltzfus said, some growers "think the crops are in and forget about the weed control program."

Despite the end of season approaching, it is important to think about next year for weed control.

For Jimsonweed, post applications of herbicides can control it — if the weed pressure and the weeds themselves are small enough. Too big, and the roots could have enough carbohydrates stored next time around to pose a problem.

Also, some farmers can be confused when identifying weeds.

Hemp dogbane looks like milkweed. Hemp dogbane has small leaves and big branches. Milkweed is the opposite — the weed has larger leaves but no lateral branches. And milkweed is easier to kill.

Hemp dogbane is tough to kill. Hitting the field with Roundup could even pose challenges.

The Eugene Martin farm is home to 17 small plots, about 12 by 50 feet in size, according to Martin. The farm has 90 tillable acres, 44 acres in corn and the balance soybeans and about five acres of tobacco.

Most of the corn is Pioneer variety, except for a plot of Dekalb Roundup Ready corn.

The biggest weed challenge on the farm, according to Martin, includes nutsedge and lambsquarters. Martin purchased all the corn in plots and companies supplied 75 percent of the spray material. Corn was planted April 25-26 on fields minimum tilled with chisel plow. Martin uses a four-row corn planter.

Most of the applications of herbicide were post-applied.

The biggest weed challenge on the farm, according to Eugene Martin, right, includes nutsedge and lambsquarters. At left is Jeff Stoltzfus.

HARSH DROUGHT REALITIES

We knew the rains would come eventually One can't help speculating on how great this corn crop would have been had Floyd's moisture came in June or July.

By now, I'm sure many of you have had an opportunity to view the results of the drought from your combine or silage chopper. Serious yield deficiencies coupled with lodging from the storm will create hardships for many farmers.

Loss of equity as a result of low yield can paint an ugly picture on a financial statement.

In the Midwestern corn belt, 80 to 85 percent of farmers are cushioned from the risk of low yields by carrying crop insurance. They use their policy as collateral for securing operating loans. Some farmers use insurance as the foundation for forward pricing opportunities.

In Pennsylvania, however, only about 25 percent of eligible farmers avail themselves of this chance to protect their production.

Why? Here are three possible reasons:

1. If a farmer cannot produce an accurate yield history covering the previous four years, he will be assigned a percentage of the countywide average. Insuring 65 percent of a 85-95 bushel yield guarantees you about 55-60 bushels per acre, not enough to satisfy bill collectors.

2. Broader diversification on most Pennsylvania farms helps spread the risk over many enterprises, thereby lifting the economic burden from any one crop.

3. Historically, Pennsylvania has long enjoyed favorable growing conditions. Weather in the most recent decade, however, has not been kind to many areas of the state.

Several members of the Pennsylvania Master corn Growers Association have recognized a need to make crop insurance a more useful tool for Pennsylvania farmers. Over the past eight months, a series of work sessions with Assistant Pennsylvania Ag Secretary Russell Redding have resulted in a plan to improve crop insurance for Pennsylvanians.

We have compiled a list of iniquities in the program that needs to be addressed, and the USDA has been working with us to make these changes.

- The midwest policy allows a farmer to claim loss in one section while other sections he farms are not affected. In the East, we need the ability to make a claim where one field is damaged by calamity while other locations are normal.
- Midwest farmers have the option of purchasing crop revenue coverage, a combination of yield and price which insures gross revenue per acre.
- Whole farm gross revenue protection would serve the diversified operation by covering crops and livestock for a total farm return. This is currently being tested in some states.
- Growers should be able to easily insure a much wider variety of specialty crops and livestock than is currently offered.

But as these changes are being considered by USDA, what can we do to better prepare for next year?

First, make sure your yield records are complete and accurate. Second, begin now to find a crop insurance agent you feel comfortable with. Ask your regular insurance agent for help, or check your FSA office for their suggestions.

Third, spend some time "running the numbers" this winter to see if the various crop insurance plans can be beneficial to your business.

And finally, call or write Sen. Rick Santorum by Rep. Tim Holder and ask them to support the changes discussed here when they come before the agricultural committee.

review what we learned.

Many folks were faced with making decisions and doing things that they had not done before. Cutting silage in early August was one of those decisions.

One issue that I was concerned about was the regrowth potential of corn that was severely drought-stressed. Generally it seemed that corn that had pollinated and had some ears was able to show some recovery after the rain began in some areas in mid August. Corn that had no ears did not seem to recover.

Corn that was chopped for silage often was wetter than it appeared and there appeared to be a fairly narrow window between too dry and too wet. Once the rain began to fall and some fields greened up, then the corn began to take up moisture again and become very wet.

Some reported to me that the density of the silage chopped from drought-stressed fields at the right moisture was lighter than normal. A key ingredient to success this year was to monitor moistures carefully and pick and choose fields as they reached the desired moisture level of 65 to 70 percent.

I visited some producers who were continually monitoring moistures during harvest with reasonably good success. Many who did not ended up with juicing silage. There is no substitute for testing.

The forage quality of the drought-stunted silage was reasonable, but not great. Energy levels of this kind of corn were about 80 percent of normal. Nitrate levels were generally elevated but within manageable levels. Potassium levels were elevated across the board, with high levels in some cases. This is because potassium is taken up early in the season and then is diluted in the silage during grain fill. When grain fill is limited, then potassium levels are not diluted. The fiber digestibility of this silage should be good, because the plants generally do not produce as much lignin under drought conditions.

By late August I began to see lots of corn borer and earworm damage to the ears in many southeast Pennsylvania fields. With this there seemed to be an increase in the levels of ear molds as well. I had several samples of ears run through our diagnostic clinic and almost all had evidence of fusarium and aspergillus. Fusarium is capable of producing a variety of mycotoxins and aspergillus can produce aflatoxin. The presence of these molds, the low density of the silage this year, and the difficulty of getting the moisture correct at harvest all suggest that we may have more mycotoxin and aflatoxin problems than normal this year.

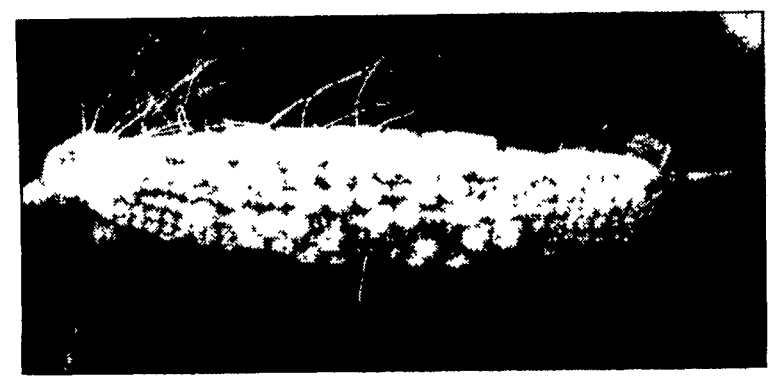
There also are lots of ear smut in many of these drought-damaged fields, and this is typical of drought-damaged corn. Generally, smut does not result in mycotoxins in the silage or grain but it sure is ugly.

I also anticipated more stalk lodging this year and my trip through the southeast part of the state last week confirmed this is happening. It appears to be happening because of a combination of both root and stalk lodging.

Grain harvest is under way in some areas and the preliminary reports in drought-stunted areas are that yields are variable, as expected. In some areas the recovery from the drought has been more than expected but in other areas there has been essentially no recovery.

I suspect we may see more harvest losses than usual this year with the small ears in many locations. Drydown seems to be fairly rapid in most areas because of the accumulation of heat units that we had, but I am finding that there is some variability in drought-stunted fields where you'll have some corn that was delayed in maturity because of the drought and some that has developed well.

Mold on ear tips is common in some drought-stuned fields this year.



Late, poorly pollinated ears are scattered throughout many drought-stunted fields.

USGC Releases Value-Enhanced Corn Quality Report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "Our commitment to educating endusers about the quality and reliability of U.S. feed grains is crucial to the success of U.S. farmers," said Kenneth Hobbie, USGC president and CEO.

"The '1998/99 Value-Enhanced Corn Quality Report' continues to establish the United States as a consistent and reliable supplier of high quality corn to the world market."

Among the key findings in this year's report:

• Estimated total VEC acreage in 1998 was between 3.0-3.5 million acres, or 4.3-4.8 percent of total U.S. harvested acreage. 1999 VEC acreage is projected to increase to 3.6-4.0 million acres or 5.0-5.6 percent of total U.S. harvested acreage.

• The portion of producers growing some type of VEC continues to rise at 12 percent in 1998, up from 10 percent in 1997.

• 1998's favorable planting condition, good kernel filling and field drying conditions enabled early harvest with little artificial drying. These conditions resulted in high test weights and starch contents and low stress cracks.

• Estimated average premiums received by producers ranged from 45-60 cents per bushel for white corn and 20-30 cents per bushel for high oil corn more than $1.20 per bushel for high amylose corn. The report notes that producer premiums vary, especially for VEC products not grown under contract, and premiums may decrease slightly in 1999 as supply increases. In years of short supply caused by weather or disease problems, premiums can increase dramatically as the marketing year progresses.

The Council's 1998/99 VEC Report has several new features including four-year data charts for sample tests, an analysis of variability of export grade factors, a summary selection of producers' responses, and the addition of Rapid Visco Analyzers and results in the testing technologies section.

This year's report contains chapters covering growing conditions, overall yields and export data; testing technologies, methodology and results; sample results; chapters on specific VEC varieties and an extensive section of date and references.

A limited number of full reports are available by calling the U.S. Grains Council at (202) 789-0789.

Penn State Looks At Optimum Plant Densities, Digestibility In Corn Hybrids

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — In a dry year, according to the Penn State corn specialist, digestibility of corn is hurt than in a normal or wet year.

And new corn hybrids are beginning to focus on the fiber and starch components of the plant to improve digestibility, according to Greg Roth, corn specialist and Penn State Agronomy associate professor.

At high populations, upward of 36,000-42,000 plants per acre, starch and lignin increases. Penn State has determined that there is a slight decrease in digestibility as you increase plant population, noted Roth at the first Silage and Forage Expo at the Glen Krall dairy farm near Cornwall.

Roth spoke to more than 80 producers and agri-industry representatives in late August at the Krall farm.

What is the optimum corn plant density for silage? About 30,000 plants per acre, Roth said. "Be somewhat conservative on population," he told producers at the Expo. "Don't go much over 30,000."

At several locations, forage quality did not vary because of row spacing, said Roth. Research examined 30-inch rows with a 27,000 plant population per acre with a yield of 21.8 tons per acre at 72.6 percent digestibility, 30-inch rows at 32,000 plants per acre with a yield of 22.8 tons per acre and a 72.7 percent digestibility, and 15-inch rows at 32,000 plants per acre with a 24.3 tons per acre at 72.2 percent digestibility.

Row width, Roth noted, can increase yields. On 15-inch rows, there was a 5-10 percent benefit in the amount of forage harvested, but at increased cost. "Maybe on a farm with a good planter you may be able to beat these results," he noted. Improved management of the planter and tractor could provide benefits.

"For an individual to invest in a narrow-row head is kind of cost-prohibitive," said Roth. That 10 percent increase in yield requires more starter fertilizer and insecticide, and other considerations have to be increased.

Trials also looked at planting date response to narrow-row corn. At the Penn State Southeast Research Station at Landisville, there were some benefits to using narrow rows. One trial examined a planting in late April at 30-inch rows for a yield of 22.6 tons per acre and the same time at 15-inch rows with a yield of 22 tons per acre.

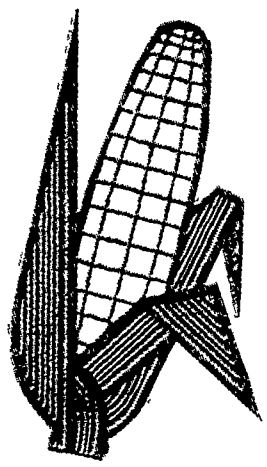
Another planting in late May at 30-inch rows yielded 20.3 tons per acre, after hay, and at 15-inch rows, the same planting time yielded 21.7 tons per acre.

A third planting, after barley, in the middle of June at 30-inch rows yielded 20.1 tons per acre and, on 15-inch rows, 22 tons per acre.

For silage, later planted corn was higher in fiber and digestibility was off by several units. For high-producing animals, double-cropping the corn is "not the best thing going," Roth said.

On the hybrid issues, continuing focus is on yield and stress tolerance and how hybrids handle stress, including drought. Hybrids do vary in digestibility, Roth noted.

Some years silage feeds better, but in a drought, digestibility is effected. Work is being done to increase the digestibility of corn so cows chew the cud less, eat more, and can increase milk production. With new hybrids incorporating increased digestibility, "we may have to rethink a lot of our conventional recommendations," Roth said. That may entail combining "certain characteristics of starch and certain characteristics of fiber to optimize the feed for a high-producing cow."



CORN BITS

CROPPING SYSTEMS AND THE DROUGHT
GREG ROTH
Penn State
Agronomy
Associate Professor

Many folks will be rethinking their cropping systems this year because of the toll the drought had on their corn crop.

It is important to consider the long-term perspective when making these decisions. Corn usually provides the most feed per acre and can maximize nutrient uptake, but it is somewhat sensitive to drought, particularly when grown following corn on the shallower soils.

Introducing other crops like alfalfa, wheat, and soybeans into a rotation will limit total feed production potential but will reduce the risk of drought. These crops can improve corn yields on the remaining acres because of more timely planting and rotational effects on the corn. Thus as we move to shallower and more droughty soils, the proportion of drought-resistant crops in the rotation should increase in a cropping system.

Crop rotation decisions are complex, especially on dairy farms, since nutrient management is an increasingly important consideration and because the rotation is dominated by the feed requirements of the operation. Typical rotational responses of dairy farms that are plagued by drought have been to reduce corn grown for grain acres and substitute some soybeans, barley, or more alfalfa or grass.

Some producers grow forage sorghum as an alternative silage crop for heifers. These substitutions are most applicable when these crops can be included in the feed program with minimal effects on production or sold to purchase high-quality feeds.

Based on the economic analyses I have been involved in with several projects, these substitutions seem justified when long-term corn yields average less than 90-100 bushels per acre.

The bottom line is that each operation needs to continually carefully evaluate cropping options based on long-term yield data, cost of production records, and the cost of purchased alternative feeds.

Grain Harvest Considerations For Drought- Stressed Corn

PETER THOMISON
Ohio State University

This year's widespread drought has resulted in smaller than normal ears, and much greater percentage of "nubbin" ears in many fields. In addition, plants are shorter than normal with reduced ear heights. As a result of these conditions, some combine and harvesting adjustments may be necessary.

The following are management suggestions from ag engineers and equipment specialists on harvesting drought-damaged crops.

- Review the operator's manual for suggestions on harvesting a "light crop."
- With short or lodged corn, run the gathering snouts and chains low. Watch for stones, and be sure stone-protective devices are working.
- Drive carefully and at normal speeds to avoid excessive harvest loss and machine damage from stones.
- For small ears, set stalk rolls and snapping plates closer than normal to snap off a higher percentage of ears. Do not attempt to snap off barren cobs.
- If clean shelling is a problem, increase cylinder speed slightly, and if necessary, decrease concave clearance. With a rotary machine, check rotary-concave clearance. Avoid excessive damage to kernels from good ears.
- If cleaning losses are high, open the chaffer and chaffer extension slightly.
- Initially decrease the amount of air from the cleaning fan. If cleaning becomes a problem, increase the fan blast, and close the lower sieve slightly.
- Be alert to changes in weather and crop conditions, and make adjustments as necessary.

Md. Grain Board, Partners Receive DOE Grant

EDGEWATER, Md. — The Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board, in partnership with the Baltimore Metropolitan Clean Cities Program, Metropolitan Washington Alternative Fuels Partnership, Virginia Corn Growers Association, and the Illinois Corn Marketing Board will establish 5-7 E85 refueling stations in the metro area.

The Maryland Energy Administration is the primary administering agency and the grantee for the proposed work and activities under this project.

Total project funds are estimated at $289,560. These public stations will provide U.S. Postal Service, federal, state, and local fleets and private consumers an opportunity to realize the clean air benefits of E85 motor fuel. The project supports the Baltimore-Washington Clean Cities collective goal of eliminating barriers to alternative fuel use. This project is also aimed at reducing harmful greenhouse gases and regulated emissions.

"This Department of Energy Grant will allow some of the 50,000 local E85 vehicles to operate on ethanol, the fuel for which they were designed," said Breck Debnam, president of the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board. "Expansion of the ethanol market is important to grain farmers and the rural economy. If all these vehicles utilized ethanol, it would mean the sale of about 13 million bushels of corn."

For more information on the project, contact Lynne Hoot, executive director, Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board, at (410) 956-5771.

Penn State Regional Agronomy Team To Serve Crop Producers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A Penn State Cooperative Extension pilot program designed to better serve the educational and informational needs of crop producers and the agronomic industry has begun.

The Capitol Region Extension Agronomy Team will work with grain and forage crop producers, crop consultants, and crop supply and service industries and others in Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, and York counties.

"This pilot program is the culmination of more than a year of discussions about how Penn State can best assist this important segment of the state's agricultural industry," said Ted Alter, director of Penn State Cooperative Extension and associate dean in the College of Agricultural Sciences. "With the advice and collaboration of our industry partners, we've established a program that could serve as a model for other extension programs and regions around the state."

"With consolidation and other recent changes in the industry, companies no longer have enough personnel in the field to help farmers solve many of today's production problems," said Don Stuff, past president of the Pennsylvania Agronomic Products Council. "That's why it's imperative for cooperative extension and Penn State, with help from industry, to focus their expertise and educational resources on issues affecting growers. We're very pleased with Penn State's response to this critical need."

The regional team will consist of four county-based extension agents, each of whom will specialize in certain aspects of agronomy. The team will be led by Paul Craig, a Dauphin County-based agent who will focus on forage crops. Other participating agents, with their home counties and specialties, are Del Voight, Lebanon County, integrated pest management and crop protection; John Rowehl, Cumberland County, grain crops; and Mark Goodson, York County, soils, nutrient management and water quality.

"As agricultural technology and the challenges facing producers become more complex, this kind of specialization is needed for extension agents to stay on the cutting edge," said Steven Fales, head of Penn State's agronomy department. "This initiative will strengthen the ties between faculty extension specialists at the University Park campus and the agents in the field, who will participate with faculty on research projects that have practical applications for industry."

Penn State Cooperative Extension's Capitol Region was chosen to pilot the program because it encompasses much of the state's most productive agricultural land. The region generates more than $2.5 billion in agricultural receipts annually.

"In 1995, the region accounted for 37 percent of Pennsylvania's agricultural production," said Michelle Rodgers, Capitol Region director for Penn State Cooperative Extension. "Thirty-eight percent of the state's dairy production and 34 percent of the state's field crop production takes place in these seven counties."

Rodgers said the regional team approach will give producers and the agronomic industry access to more, not less, expertise. "People should not think of this program as taking away their local extension agent," she said. "Rather, they'll be gaining the expertise of three additional agents, who will conduct educational programs and consult on production problems either in person or by using communications technology — such as cellular phones and lap-top computers with e-mail — from anywhere in the region.

"Team members also will have the knowledge to provide specialized training to others who work with growers, such as certified crop advisers, industry sales representatives, and other extension agents," she said.

Corn Can Be Used For 'Entertainment' Farming, Too

Saturday 10 a.m. to dusk, and Sept. 20 through Oct. 30 Monday through Thursday 12 p.m. to dusk, in addition to Friday and Saturday 10 a.m. to dusk.

This year the heat and drought turned away many tourists, according to Coleman. Normally about 400,000 people visit the Strasburg Railroad per year, 100,000 of them in August alone, which proves a good source of advertising for the maze. But the numbers are down because of the unusually hot weather, with a string of 100-degree days in the midst of summer.

Visitors came from as far away as the southern regions of South America, and from Russia, Turkey, Spain, Japan, Australia, and other countries.

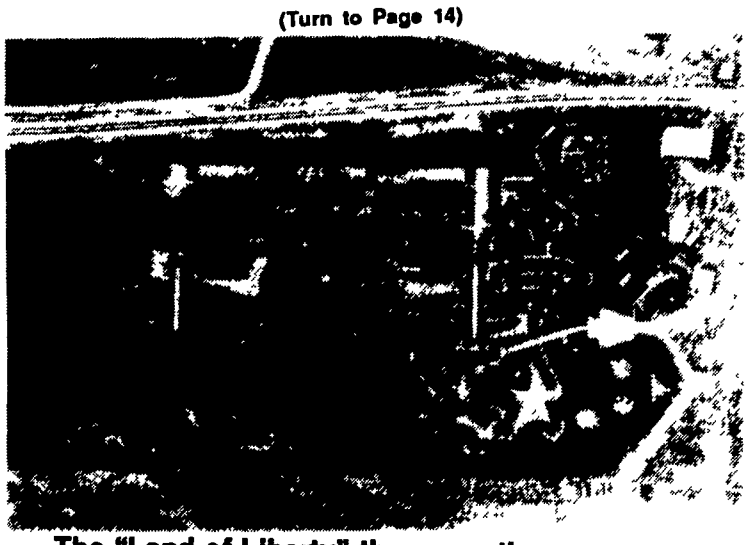
The maze included an extensive petting zoo, mini-mazes, hay rides, food, refreshments, gift shop, and weekly special events.

This year the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association and Penn State Extension Service also had a corn products stand at the maze.

For more information, contact Coleman at (717) 687-6843.

(Turn to Page 14)

The "Land of Liberty" theme proved especially attractive for area tourists. Each day during the season the maze averaged about 1,200-1,500 visitors. Last year about 50,000 visitors showed up to tour the maze, in the shape of Noah's Ark. The first year the maze was laid out in the shape of a locomotive and the second year, a horse and buggy. Lara Schutsky, tour orientator, speaks to visitors.



The "Land of Liberty" theme on the corn maze as seen high above. Note the careful attention to detail and the four "stars."

This marked the fourth year in a row that Cherry-Crest Farm, operated by Jack and Donna Coleman in Paradise, put up the "World's Largest Attended Maze" in which every year a new "theme" for the corn maze is selected.

'Entertainment'

The drought emergency this year had an effect on some of the tourists, but luckily, according to Coleman, enough rain had fallen. In mid-July, two irrigations were needed to keep the corn stalks from turning brown and brittle. Visitors tour the maze.

PMCGA, Seed Industry Want Your Membership

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) – Consider joining NCGA and PMCGA today to be part of a national effort to promote corn and corn producer-related issues.

With our Membership Incentive Program (MIP) corn producers who grow five or more acres of corn can now join both organizations with little real cost.

The MIP program works like this:

If you sign up for a three-year joint membership for $75, you can receive a free bag of seed from one of our participating industry partners listed on the form. To get signed up, complete your membership form and send it in to our office at the address listed on the form along with a check for $75 made payable to PMCGA to cover the three-year membership.

Our office will then send your name to the seed company you have selected and a coupon to you indicating you have qualified for the program. You will then be contacted by one of the seed company reps and your seed will be delivered before the planting season.

This is a win-win-win proposition – you get a bag of seed and membership in a large national organization for $75, NCGA and PMCGA get your support, and the seed industry gets to showcase new genetics to key producers.

As a member of NCGA, you will be part of a 30,000-member national organization that is addressing many of the issues we face in the industry. Current issues include corn prices, industry consolidation, environmental issues, and development of new markets for corn.

NCGA also sponsors the National Corn Yield Contest and Commodity Classic. They also send a quarterly newsletter to all members, entitled the National Corn Grower. PMCGA sponsores one or two conferences a year, the five-Acre Corn Club, Corn Talk, and helps to promote corn issues to the public at many local events.

If you are a corn producer who grows at least five acres of corn, consider joining for three years today and taking advantage of the MIP program. Use the MIP program to look at some new hybrids that some of our seed company partners have available this year. Remember, membership in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) automatically makes you a member in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Severe Compaction Just Lingers On

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Right when serious soil compaction seems to be solved, it can re-appear to cut corn yields, according to an Ohio State University study.

Corn plots intentionally compacted more than 10 years ago had a 14 percent yield loss in 1998, even though those plots seemed to have recovered the prior year, said Ohio State agricultural engineer Randall Reeder.

The 1998 yield on compacted plots was 169 bushels per acre compared to the control group yield of 198 bushels per acre, Reeder said. In 1997, the soils had appeared to have recovered because yields were relatively equal for both groups, after showing a 15 percent difference in 1996.

"Even after you think your yields have recovered from compaction, it can come back to haunt you as it affected our yields in two of the last three years," Reeder said.

Reeder has been studying compaction on the poorly drained Hoytville silty clay loam at the Northwestern Branch of the university's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wood County. He used a 20-ton-per-axle grain cart to compact every inch of ground each fall from 1987 to 1989. Since then, he's been checking yield data at the site every year in order to determine the effect of compaction on crop production.

Last year's weather at the Northwestern branch brought extremes — spring flooding followed by a month of dry weather. Corn was planted on May 17. Reeder isn't sure if weather extremes intervened to worsen yield potential on the compacted plots, because it was a pretty decent year for yields on the non-compacted site.

"It was not a usual or average year as far as corn yield, because we got close to 200 bushels per acre (on non-compacted soils), which is a pretty good yield," Reeder said.

Flooded fields in late August apparently cut soybean yields, but compaction did not, Reeder said. Yields were overall below-average — but roughly the same — on compacted and non-compacted plots as they were in the previous year, Reeder said. The 1998 soybean yield was 30 bushels per acre on compacted plots compared to 32 bushels per acre on non-compacted plots.

Despite the fairly even yields, it's too early to tell if compaction is a less serious threat to soybeans than it is to corn, Reeder said.

Soil compaction's long-term effect is not surprising, Reeder said. Scientists can still trace compacted tracks of this historic Oregon Trail on Western U.S. farmlands, he said. In additon, forestry studies can identify compacted locations of logging roads decades after abandonment.

In another aspect of the research, Reeder's studies confirmed that subsoiling can repair compacted soils somewhat and may even boost yield on non-compacted ground.

Soybean yield on subsoiled, compacted ground was 38 bushels per acre, compared to 30 bushels per acre on non-subsoiled compacted plots. On non-compacted soils, subsoiling gave a respectable yield of 42 bushels per acre compared to noncompacted, nonsubsoiled ground that yielded 32 bushels per acre. As for corn, subsoiled, compacted plots gave a yield of 187 bushels per acre, compared to non-subsoiled, compacted plots that yielded 169 bushels per acre.

But don't think that subsoiling is a miracle cure, Reeder said. Compacted soils didn't return to normal yields until two or three years after subsoiling. The best thing is to avoid practices that compact soil, he said.

"Subsoiling every two or three years in that Hoytville soil is a good economic practice," Reeder said. "Subsoiling compacted ground gives a nice yield increase. But the best yields still don't equal the non-compacted control plots. The best yields overall are on the subsoiled, noncompacted control plots."

To prevent compaction, farmers should avoid running equipment on too-wet soils. These practices also can help relieve stress on soils:

- Adopt controlled traffic patterns. Run equipment on the same paths. Restricting compaction to the same percentage of the field and leaving the rest of the soil ideal for root growth is the best management tool.
- Reduce axle loads by emptying grain carts before completely full.
- Buy equipment with tandem axles to cut axle loads.
- Use wider or bigger-diameter tires on equipment, install duals, or use equipment with tracks to minimize pressure on soil.

NATIONAL CORN CROP REPORTS DOWN IN SEPTEMBER

GREG ROTH
Penn State
Agronomy
Associate Professor

The following information was released Sept. 10 by the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), Agricultural Statistics Board, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Corn production is forecast at 9.38 billion bushels, down 2 percent from the last forecast and down 4 percent from 1998. Based on Sept. 1. conditions, yields are expected to average 132.2 bushels per acre, down 2.5 bushels per acre from August and 2.2 bushels from a year ago. If realized, this would be the fourth largest production and third highest yield on record. Acreage for grain harvest is estimated at 71 million acres, unchanged from August.

Pennsylvania's corn yield forecast remained unchanged from the previous month at 72 bushels per acre, compared to 111 bushels per acre in 1998. Total corn production in Pennsylvania was estimated at 74,160,000 bushels, down 42,390,000 bushels from 1998. Corn yields in New Jersey were estimated to average 40 bushels per acre in 1999, compared to 92 bushels per acre in 1998.

WALINGA SILO-FILLER
30TH Anniversary Year 1969-1999

The Silo-Filler has been designed to give the user maximum capacity, flexibility and product control. It does not actually "Throw" the product, but blows it gently, using a cushion of air. With the Walinga Silo-Filler, you simply dump from your truck or trailer directly into the hopper, and the transfer auger moves the product up and into the Drop-Thru / Blow-Thru Airlock. The blower then moves the product up the silo pipes. Ideal for blowing high moisture corn into silos, the Silo-Filler is compact, and can easily be moved from one location to another.

Corn Growers Call On Congress To Take Action For Agriculture

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) called on Congress to take immediate action to address the economic concerns facing U.S. farmers.

"Despite the fundamental soundness of Freedom to Farm, our current price situation underscores the fact that regardless of how good a farm program is, there is always the possibility that farmers' cash income will not cover production costs and other expenses," NCGA Chairman Ryland Utlaut told the Senate Agriculture Committee. "In those cases, we need the federal government's help to address problems that are beyond our control."

Utlaut, who farms near Grand Pass, Mo., is one of nearly 200 corn growers who were in Washington in August to shape NCGA policy and take their concerns to Capitol Hill. In his testimony, he chronicled the decline in corn prices over the past several years, from $3.24 per bushel for 1995 corn, to $2.71 per bushel for 1996, to $2.43 for 1997, to $1.95 for 1998, and a projected $1.65-$2.05 for 1999.

"The nation's corn growers continue to support a market-oriented approach to farm policy - an approach that allows farmers to make the basic production decisions for their operations," Utlaut told the committee. "But if Freedom to Farm is going to work, there are other factors that need to fall into place.

"We need affordable, effective crop insurance tools to help us manage weather and price risks. We need a strong global economy and access to markets around the world. We need a tax system that allows us to keep a reasonable portion of what we own. We need a commitment to research to unlock new uses and keep us competitive in the future. We need an efficient transportation system to get our products to market," he said. "But because those things are not fully in place, America's farmers find ourselves in a very difficult position today.

"Given the current state of the farm economy, there's clearly a need for assistance. Farmers need immediate aid to help them weather the current crisis. But at the same time, we cannot lose sight of the importance of forward-thinking, long-term policies that will help us avoid future farm crises by building stable markets for our products both at home and abroad," Utlaut emphasized.

To provide short-term relief and to begin building long-term profitability for U.S. agriculture, NCGA is urging Congress to take immediate action in the following areas.

• Market loss payments – Support emergency market loss assistance to provide immediate, short-term relief for struggling farmers.

• Payment limitation – Support changes to the marketing assistance loan program to ensure that a producer's full production is eligible for loan deficiency payments (LDP's). Current payment limitation rules will severely restrict marketing options, increasing loan forfeitures and storage and interest costs.

• Trade – Help build export markets by supporting reform of U.S. sanctions policies, China's admission into the World Trade Organization, and further reform of agricultural trade policies in the upcoming round of WTO negotiations.

• Transportation – Support authorization and funding for needed improvements to the aging lock and dam system in order to help farmers ship their grain more efficiently and cost-effectively.

• Risk management – Pass crop insurance reform legislation that increases affordable risk management options for all producers. The preferred means of doing this is by maximizing subsidies at the highest levels of coverage.

• Ethanol market development – Support efforts to increase the use of clean-burning ethanol in reformulated gasoline, a move that can add 20-50 cents to the value of every bushel of corn grown in the United States.

Avery To Speak At Corn, Soybean Conference

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Dennis Avery, director of global food issues at the Hudson Institute is scheduled to be the keynote speaker at the upcoming Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean conference, Feb. 8 at the Radisson Penn Harris Convention Center.

While Avery's specific topic for the conference has not been set yet, PMCGA expects him to address the future opportunities that lie ahead in production agriculture.

Some of Avery's previous presentations have been entitled "Saving the Planet with High Feed Efficiency" and "The Greatest Opportunity in Farming History."

This is a great opportunity to hear an excellent speaker. Mark your calendar and plan to attend.

Another featured speaker PMCGA has on the program this year is Gene Lewis from the United Soybean Board. Lewis is an Iowa soybean and corn farmer who will be making two presentations: one on ag perspective for 2000 and another on new uses development and the soybean board.

The conference will also feature Gene Gantz, a crop insurance consultant with a session on the upcoming significant changes in crop insurance and how they will affect Pennsylvania grain farmers. The conference will also touch on some production related topics such as the use of lightbars for sprayer guidance and the use of air induction nozzles to reduce drift.

The conference will also feature numerous industry exhibits, Five-Acre Corn Club Awards, and the Pennsylvania Soybean Contest results. The event is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board, the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, and Penn State.

For more information on attending or exhibiting at the conference, contact the Penn State Agronomy Department at 814-865-2543.

LYNN HOFFMAN RETIRES FROM PENN STATE AGRONOMY DEPARTMENT
GREG ROTH
Penn State
Agronomy
Associate Professor

After a carreer of more than 30 years with Penn State Agronomy Department, Lynn Hoffman has retired effective Sept. 30.

Lynn was also a long time member of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association and participated in many corn production-related events over the years.

Lynn's primary research and extension interest was the development of no-till production systems in our state. Along with his colleague, the late Bill McClellan, Lynn traveled extensively around the state and conducted many no-till demonstration with farmers and their local extension agents or conservation districts.

Lynn gained much respect for his practical approach to making these systems work and was a popular speaker at many winter excursion meetings over the years

Lynn was responsible for supervising the Penn State Agronomy farm during his tenure at the university and organized many field days for industry representatives and farmers to view ongoing research at the station. Lynn helped to coordinate the machinery demonstrations at Ag Progress Days as well and always helped to point out the various things to consider when purchasing one of the machines that were being demonstrated.

Lynn used many innovative research extension methods during his career. He was a proponent of field demonstrations, but also pioneered the production of agronomic videos and satellite broadcasts of winter meetings. On the research side, he helped to launch Penn State's precision ag research effort and was also responsible for the development of automated data collection systems in our forage variety testing program.

Lynn's enthusiasm and candid approach will be missed by many of us. Lynn and his wife Pepper plan to continue to live in the State College area.

Corn Grower Leaders Explore Options For Ethanol In California

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Officials from the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) were in California to explore opportunities to expand the use of clean-burning ethanol in the state's gasoline.

The use of reformulated gasoline (RFG), which is blended with an oxygenate such as ethanol or methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE), is required to fight smog in parts of California by the Federal Clean Air Act and by California air quality regulations. In March, California Gov. Gray Davis ordered a phase-out of MTBE because its contamination of the state's water supplies poses "a significant risk to the environment."

NCGA economists estimate that if ethanol were eventually to replace MTBE as the primary oxygenate in California RFG, it would be a 400-600 million gallon per year market, utilizing 160-240 million bushels of corn. This boost in the ethanol market could add approximately 10 cents to the value of every bushel of corn grown in the United States.

Protect Yourself Against Low Crop Prices

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

NORCROSS, Ga. — This is no time for knee-jerk reactions. Low crop prices are causing enough economic stress as it is without aggravating the situation with poor management decisions.

What is a poor management decision? How about basing this year's fertilizer program on anticipated crop price rather than on expected benefit from the fertilizer, or other essential production inputs for that matter. In other words, it is not good business to abandon sound agronomics.

So, what to do? How do we make the most of a difficult situation?

Once the decision has been made to plant a certain crop, it becomes a matter of making the most of the opportunity. This is done by planning a program to produce at maximum efficiency, to produce maximum net return per acre. A term once popular in the press for this goal was maximum economic yield, MEY.

Farming is a complicated business, but the basic economics are simple. Gross income (i.e., crop price x total yield) less total cost of production determines profit. So there are only three basic factors to look at: 1) crop price, 2) yield level, and 3) production cost. The question becomes, which ones can be significantly controlled, or at least influenced to a meaningful degree, by the grower?

Of those three basic factors, growers usually have less control over crop price than the others. However, if a premium is paid based on quality, then here is an opportunity that should be considered when planning the production program. And, of course, any marketing strategy that increases crop price should certainly be employed.

Yield level is a key component to profitability and one that the grower can definitely influence. Greater profits come from higher yields. But higher yields also demand greater inputs that mean increased financial risk. But let's come back to financial risk. First consider the risk to the crop of cutting back on inputs to less than optimum, perhaps as a reaction to an anticipated low crop price. This is analogous to pulling money out of the stock market when the market is down, disregarding the basic soundness of the investment.

Production inputs such as fertilizer are investments that should be managed wisely, according to soil and crop needs. Crop price should have only a minor impact on such decisions. Research has shown many times that the optimum rate of fertilizer is somewhat inelastic relative to both crop price and cost of the fertilizer itself.

The importance of high yield cannot be overestimated. After all, this is the entire basis for the income to offset –or more than offset–the costs of production. Stop and think a moment. How often do growers make much profit producing at the county average yield level? Sure, there are exceptions, but for most of agriculture, crop prices do not change much over a period of weeks or months.

It has already been acknowledged that higher yields demand greater inputs which in turn means greater financial risk. But how much additional risk are we talking about? There is a certain amount of cost involved regardless of yield level. In fact, the fixed costs (mortgage, taxes, etc.) are incurred whether the field is planted or not. It is only that relatively small incremental increase in variable costs for additional fertilizer, more irrigation water, extra insect spray, etc., above that typically incurred for a less yield goal that is at risk.

Sound agronomics with a view toward efficient high yield production is a grower's best protection against low crop prices. The bottom line is, beware of knee-jerk reactions.

Hybrid Corn Effective In Reducing Phosphorus In Litter

NEWARK, Del. — For some years, scientist have been tracking nutrients in the waterways of the Delmarva peninsula.

Too many nutrients increase the risk of pollutants in water and decrease the oxygen available for aquatic life. While nutrients move into the water from many sources including homeowners' yards and gardens, the effects of animal agriculture - especially poultry litter - on water quality has been a major concern in Delaware.

Now, a diet for poultry has been developed that reduces phosphorus levels in poultry manure.

George Malone, University of Delaware UD poultry extension specialist and associate scientist, said when broilers were fed diets with reduce supplemental inorganic phosphorus and provided a new hybrid of corn, enriched with an enzyme to aid phosphorus digestion, total phosphorus levels in a three-flock litter dropped 41 percent. Better yet, when soluble phosphorus was measured in litter, levels dropped by 82 percent of the standard commercial diet.

"The decrease in soluble phosphorus is particularly significant because soluble nutrients like phosphorus pas more readily through the soil and into the water." said Malone.

In a project aimed at improving broiler nutrition while reducing levels of phosphorus in litter, Malone teamed with other UD researchers and colleagues from the USDA and industry. The project was made possible largely through the collaboration and financial support of Townsends, Inc., a Delaware-based poultry and agribusiness company; Optimum Quality Grains L.L.C., a subsidiary of Dupont; and BASF Corporation, a manufacturer of poultry products.

According to Malone, chicken manure has a high phosphorus content relative to nitrogen content. The long-term consequence of applying litter on fields to meet nitrogen requirements is a buildup of phosphorus levels in soil.

Broiler litter is high in phosphorus for a number of reasons. While animals require the mineral for muscle and bone development, as much as 75 percent of the phosphorus found naturally in corn and other grains is biochemically unavailable to chickens. This is because the phosphorus is locked into a molecule called phytic acid, or phytate. Chickens lack phytase, the enzyme required to digest phytate Thus phytate passes unused through the chickens and into the litter. To meet growth and health requirements, chickens must be fed a non-phytate form of inorganic phosphate.

Dr. Victor Raboy, a USDA scientist, identified a recessive low-phytic acid gene in corn. As a recipe calls for certain ingredients when baking a cake, so a gene codes for certain ingredients when building a cell. Phosphorus is but one of many ingredients in corn. While the dominant gene in corn codes almost 75 percent phytate, a mutant gene codes for 35 percent. A high-availability phosphorus (HAP) corn - or low phytic acid corn - was developed from crossing plants with this recessive gene.

"The total phosphorus in grain remains the same," said Malone. "but the amount of phosphorus available for digestion increases."

The first of three consecutive experiments began in December of 1997. Flocks of 2,760 one-day-old male broiler chicks were used to evaluate performance in this phase of research. The birds were fed one of six different diets in four separate feed phases from birth through market. The diets compared HAP corn and regular corn, both with and without the phytase enzyme, and with decreasing percentages of dietary inorganic (non-phytate) phosphorus.

"The results of the experiments were encouraging," said Malone. "Overall, poultry performance on the reduced non-phytate phosphorus diets was comparable or better than the control diet in the winter and spring flocks. Hot weather seems to have some effect on the birds, however. Caution is needed when reducing levels of dietary inorganic phosphorus by 0.2 percent in phytase diets with either corn type. Reducing dietary phosphorus by just 0.1 percent had no influence on performance."

Another phase of the study includes a comprehensive litter analysis and greenhouse and soil transport studies. This phase is directed by Dr. Tom Sims, professor of soil and environmental chemistry and principal investigator in this project. Other members of the UD team include Dr. William Saylor, associate dean for research and a professor of animal science; Dr. Edward Odor, poultry pathologist; and Dr. Conrad Pope, a veterinary pathologist.

"Our challenge over the next few years in Delaware is to reduce phosphorus in poultry litter, especially. Tremendous efforts are under way to achieve this goal," said Malone.

Stress Tolerance Boosts Crop Yields

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

NORCROSS, Ga. – Crop scientists from around the world gathered recently to discuss the reasons for past and future yield increases. Surprisingly, many agreed that increased stress tolerance, more than greater yield potential, has increased yields in the past and will continue to do so in the future.

Today's genetics confer a stress tolerance which contributes to higher crop yields. Nutrient management, particularly with potassium, could enhance this contribution.

Every year, the NCGA sponsors a maximum yield competition among farmers. Over time, a very interesting phenomenon is emerging. While the maximum yields of rainfed corn have increased in some states, the highest yields for irrigated corn have not. Also, the (unofficial) record yield of 370 bushels per acre, harvested by Herman Warsaw in 1985, has not been topped after 13 years.

During this time, the average yield of corn in North America increased 1.7 percent per year. If the same trend applied to maximum yields, we would expect a record yield more than 450 bushels per acre by now.

Are we approaching a maximum limit on corn yield? Has the genetic potential for higher yield stopped improving?

Older corn hybrids yield as much as newer hybrids when grown in low-stress environments, but under stress they don't hold up as well. Examples of stresses in which new hybrids show their advantages are increased plant populations, drought stress, and weed competition.

Potassium has long been known as the nutrient most associated with stress tolerance in plants. It can reduce the amount of water lost through the leaves. Plants have tiny openings in their leaves called stomates through which water transpires to the atmosphere. Closing the stomates is a defense mechanism to conserve water. Plants with ample potassium close their stomates more quickly. For example, a Montana experiment showed that barley plants exposed to hot, windy conditions were able to slow water loss within five minutes when they had adequate potassium. But with lower levels of potassium, it took about 45 minutes.

Additionally, potassium keeps photosynthesis going under stress. Plant cells that lose too much water slow down in photosynthesis because of internal distortion. Potassium within plant cells has an osmotic effect that helps retain water. Plant scientists in Connecticut found that leaf potassium concentrations above optimum for normal conditions can be beneficial for stress conditions. When wheat plants were nourished with a solution three times richer in potassium than optimal for normal conditions, their leaves sustained rates of photosynthesis 67 to 114 percent higher after an 8-day water stress period. What is often called "luxury consumption" may help plants resist stress.

High crop yields always occur under stress. The highest yield occurs when plants are crowded together closely enough to use as much as possible of the available resources for growth – water, sunlight, and nutrients. In order to produce high yields, the crop needs the genetics and the nutrition to overcome stress.

Look for the optimum combination of new genetics and potassium nutrition to boost your yields with greater stress tolerance.

Can You Afford Field-Average Nutrient Management?

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

NORCROSS, Ga. – As farmers have gained more experience with site-specific crop and soil management systems, attention is turning from the equipment to the economics of site-specific management.

Many are struggling to get a clear answer regarding whether their investment in site-specific systems is giving them the payback they need. It is a tough question to answer, because traditional accounting may not adequately document the benefits derived from investments in site-specific systems. Of course, a positive bottom line has to be one of the criteria, but there are other benefits that are more subtle.

It is obvious from yield monitor data that there is variability in yield within every field. What causes that variability and how it can be managed are not always as apparent. On the rough cut of nutrient budgets, it follows from yield variability that the nutrients utilized to grow the crop and nutrients removed in the harvest will vary according to the yield levels.

From intensive soil sampling, we often find that the higher yields are obtained from areas with low soil tests relative to the rest of the field. This supports the concept that with fertilizer applications based on field-average soil tests and crop yields, the nutrients applied to the high yield areas of the field have been less than the nutrients removed by the harvested crop. On the other hand, the low yield areas of the field often have high soil test levels because applications based on field-average soil test and crop removal have been greater than the amount of nutrients removed in the harvested crop. In fact, each year that field average management continues will result in a wider variation between the low yield and high yield areas.

This means that when fields are fertilized to meet field-average requirements, the lowest yielding areas of the field will get more nutrients than they need and the higher-yielding areas will get less than they need. This leads to potential for reduced productivity on the best areas of the field. Site-specific nutrient applications will help to bring applications and removal into better balance and create a better opportunity for the high yield potential of the best areas to be realized.

Intensive sampling, yield monitoring, and variable-rate nutrient application may cost more money, but if the information generated allows farmers and their advisers to make better decisions on yield goals and nutrient management, that cost can be offset by higher yields and better allocation of fertilizer dollars. Site-specific nutrient management costs money, but using field-average management may cost even more in lost yield potential and inefficient allocation of fertilizer applied.

With the technology available to implement site-specific management, it is a good idea to take a serious look at how that technology can fit into a plan to improve yields and profits. For many farmers, the answer will be that they cannot afford to continue managing every acre the same. As benefits of integrating site-specific management of other inputs are assessed, the returns to site-specific nutrient management will likely increase.

Grain Farmers Can Market Corn Through Cattle To Increase Revenues

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

AMES, Iowa – As agricultural commodity prices decline, corn growers can increase their profits by teaming up with custom cattle feeders. Marketing corn through cattle, a practice more than 100 years old, can add as much as 33 cents per bushel to corn.

"When grain becomes this cheap, the opportunity to add value becomes increasingly important," said John Lawrence, director of the Iowa Beef Center at Iowa State University and ISU Extension economist. "By marketing corn through cattle, corn growers can generate revenue, essentially increasing the size of their operations without investing in new resources. It's a way of getting more money out of their crop."

According to Lawrence, corn growers can market corn through cattle by working with custom cattle feeders who provide professional production and marketing management.

In a typical agreement, corn growers deliver their corn to custom feedlots where they own cattle and where the corn is stored. The custom feeder feeds the cattle for a fee, using the corn delivered to the feedlot. The farmer adds value to the corn by realizing a profit when the cattle are sold.

"The farmer doesn't receive payment for the corn at harvest, but for the cattle when they're sold," Lawrence said.

Research by Lawrence and Dan Loy, ISU Extension beef cattle/feedlot specialist with the Iowa Beef Center, indicates that two to three steers can be finished from the production of one acre of corn, depending on grain yields.

The value of corn production equals 20 to 30 percent of the value of the finished cattle – $120 to $150 per head, depending on corn and feeder cattle prices. A profit of $20 per head adds 33 cents per bushel to the value of the corn.

"In nine out of 10 years, marketing corn through cattle beat the harvest cash price of corn," Lawrence said. "In six out of 10 years, marketing corn through cattle was more profitable than selling corn at the highest monthly cash price of each year."

An alternate arrangement involves corn growers selling their corn on the cash market at the best price they can find and then purchasing corn at a lower price to feed to the cattle.

In addition to the added value, corn growers benefit in other ways. Some custom feedlots can store high-moisture corn, which means corn growers can begin their harvest earlier and reduce drying costs. Cattle in custom feedlots also sell better than those in small operations because larger lots are able to attract more packer bids.

The arrangement benefits feedlots as well, guaranteeing them a steady supply of corn as well as farmers who purchase their service.

Though the concept of marketing corn through cattle is not a new one, it's a concept that is unfamiliar to many corn growers. The practice peaked in the early 1970s, when Iowa cattle producers marketed nearly 5 million cattle from thousands of small feedlots.

"In increase in feedlots in the southern plains and Desert Southwest as well as consistent profitability in grain farming, thanks to government programs, contributed to the decline since then," Lawrence said. "The shift to Freedom to Farm encourages producers to explore ways to diversify their operations, manage risk, and add value to their grain. Adding cattle feeding to the crop enterprise does these things."

"Sixteen years ago, custom feeders were nonexistent in Iowa," Loy said, "Today it's a viable business, and feedlots are located across the state."

The Iowa Cattlemen's Association publishes a Commercial Cattle Feeders Directory. Lawrence and Loy noted that either party can initiate a relationship to market corn through cattle.

Always Inspect Equipment For Hazards, Wear

In November 1998, Larry Harpster was working on his Huntington County farm filling a plastic silage bag with high-moisture shelled corn. Because the wet corn wasn't flowing out of the gravity wagon very well, Larry climbed into the wagon and pushed the shelled corn out into the bagger.

On the 14th load of corn that day, the wagon began to tip over while he was pushing corn out. Most of the corn was out of the unloading side, but about 50 to 60 bushels were lodged on the opposite side of the wagon.

"I thought the whole wagon was tipping," Harpster said. "I didn't want to be pinned under it, so I tried to jump at an angle."

The edge of the wagon box hit the ground before Harpster could jump clear, catapulting him out of the wagon with unbelievable force. He rolled an additional 15 feet after slamming onto the ground.

"My helpers came running over to help me up, but I couldn't walk without assistance," Harpster said.

After additional inspection of the wagon, which he had borrowed from a neighbor, he found the gravity box actually tipped off of the wagon chassis. The two rear brackets holding the gravity box to the chassis were not fastened, and the right front bracket had been cracked, welded, and had broken again. The left front bracket was fastened, but had bent when the wagon went over.

"I had borrowed that bin wagon many times over the last 10 years whenever we were short of wagons," Harpster said.

After this incident, Harpster said he changed and repaired the brackets on this wagon and on his own three gravity wagons. He also secured the gravity wagons to the chassis with heavy safety chains.

Luckily, Harpster was not seriously injured. He suffered a cracked pelvis and was on crutches for two weeks, but he has since fully recovered. Luckier still was the fact that his 12-year-old son, who had been in the wagon just a short time before, was not injured.

Harpster's accident demonstrates that even though you are familiar with a piece of equipment, and have just recently used it, you should always inspect the equipment for potential hazards and wear.

Wagon brackets are not something that you may automatically think of as potentially hazardous if they fail, but Larry Harpster can tell you otherwise.

NCGA Unveils Web-Based 'Corn In The Classroom'

ST LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has introduced to its web site www.ncga.com, "Corn in the Classroom," a web-based curriculum that utilizes examples from the corn industry to teach kids mathematics, science, language arts, social studies, and even music and art.

"We are very excited about introducing this innovative curriculum that will be used not only by rural teachers, but those in urban areas as well," said NCGA Director of Communications Kevin Aandahl. "NCGA is stepping to the plate in educating and informing the general public about the corn industry. We regularly receive requests from teachers throughout the nation for teaching materials on corn, and 'Corn in the Classroom' is designed to meet this need."

The curriculum is divided into nine different units and based on the real-life experiences of a Minnesota farm family. Each unit contains a brief story, background for teachers and hands-on lesson plans that are adaptable to all ages.

"This curriculum will provide educators with fresh and different examples for teaching the core subjects required by most states," said Aandahl. "At the same time, students will enjoy learning about everything from corn's role in American history to genetics, the environment, satellites, geography, nutrition and much, much more."

Plan Now For Next Year's Corn Crop

DEL VOIGHT
Lebanon County
Agronomy Extension Agent

Fall gives you many opportunities to do something that will impact next year's crop. Liming, fertilizer applications, and fall tillage will set up the right conditions for next year's crop season. Applications of a herbicide in the fall may mean better crops next year and in future years.

Two years ago, Charlie Bomgardener, a producer near Annville, had many green fields in the fall after silage harvest that contained both perennial and annual weeds. After viewing the weeds we decided to apply Roundup to eliminate the weeds this fall.

Not all fields received the application and you could really tell the difference between treated and untreated fields the next spring. The cleanest fields in the spring were the ones that received a late fall herbicide treatment. Not only were the weeds clean, the usual chickweed and other winter annuals were eliminated. Apparently they had germinated at the time of application in the fall. This is not a one-time testimonial.

Dr. Bill Curran at Penn State and other researchers have done many studies documenting the tremendous impact fall applications of herbicides have on certain weed species, especially perennials. In his research, Hemp dogbane was controlled 90 percent with fall applications compared to 60 percent if the same product was applied in the spring.

In most cases you can suppress many perennials such as hemp dogbane during the growing season using an array of products, but those established plants will be there the next season to be suppressed again. The only way to completely kill the established plant and have no recovery the next year is to fall-apply systemic herbicides such as Roundup, Touch Down, 2,4-D or Banvel. One might control seedlings during the growing season but I am referring to those plants with large root systems that can compete much more than a few seedlings.

What is the best time?

Penn State studies show that shortly before a frost (Early October) is the best time to apply in the fall if the weeds have green leaves in good condition.

Another fall herbicide application that makes sense is to kill orchard grass and alfalfa stands in the fall. Gerald Hoffer, farming near Hershey, picked up some rented land last season that contained some alfalfa. Since Hoffer is mostly interested in grain, he decided to let the alfalfa go to first cutting in the spring, harvested the first cutting, killing the stand, and no-tilled corn into the stand. Fortunately the alfalfa stand was good and this resulted in high quality and tonnage in his first cutting. This was followed by a decent corn stand and good yield of corn. This is not always the case. I have often seen cases where producers not only got a weedy half crop of alfalfa in the spring but it was followed by a drought-stricken corn crop that was almost a complete loss.

Alfalfa produces an enormous amount of nitrogen (commonly 100-120 pounds per acre) released from its nodules on the roots, which enables some of the best corn crops to be grown in the rotation, if killed in the fall and planted early in the spring. There is no question this is the best use of the alfalfa stand. There are ways to make better decisions to either kill the alfalfa in the fall or to let it go to after first cutting. The decision to make is how many plants are there in the fall.

Make, buy, or borrow a alfalfa square (simply a one-foot square wire or wood outline), throw it randomly in to the field, and count plants within the square. If there are less than four plants per foot, kill the alfalfa this fall and plant full-season corn in spring. If, however, you find a decent stand with more than four plants per foot, then consider leaving the stand for another year. if you have to keep the stand because of forage needs, harvest first cutting and plan for silage harvest using sorghum for drought-prone areas and corn for others.

Does it make any sense get a poor quality crop of alfalfa and poor yield of corn? No. Assess alfalfa in the fall and manage accordingly. A quick look at the past years' Five-Acre Corn Club results show the relation to high yielding corn crops after legumes (soybean and alfalfa). In almost all cases the top producers rotated from a legume.

Fall-applied herbicide rates may be reduced because of the fact that the plants are more susceptible in the fall while transporting nutrients along with the herbicide into the roots for winter. For example, the labeled rate for fall application to kill alfalfa for the herbicide RoundUp is 1 quart per acre, and the spring application rate is 2 quarts. If dandelions are present, which many times is the the case, use 1 pt. of 2,4-D as a tank mix to eliminate this weed. For control of perennials in fields to rotate to corn next year, RoundUp rates can be reduced to 1 pint per acre in most cases and the highest rate needed for fall applied would be 1 quart per acre. Touchdown is another systemic herbicide similar in activity to RoundUp but is applied at a lower rate. Check the label for specifics.

By performing some key activities this fall, such as applying fall herbicides and assessing alfalfa fields and fertility levels, producers may be better prepared to ensure next season's yield and profitability.

CORN BITS

CALCULATING MOISTURE CONVERSIONS

GREG ROTH
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

Often we need to convert yields at one moisture level to yields at another. The process is actually quite simple.

Take the initial harvested weight and multiply it by the dry matter content of the grain you measured. The dry matter is equal to 100 minus the moisture. This will give you the dry matter yield of the grain. Then divide this number by the dry matter content of the standard you would like to convert to. This will give you the yield at the standard moisture content.

Example: You harvest 7,600 pounds of grain at 21 percent moisture from one acre. You want to know the yield at 15.5 percent moisture. Multiply 7,600 by .79 (the percent dry matter) and you get 6,004 pounds of dry matter. Then divide 6,004 by 0.845 (the dry matter at 15.5 percent) and you get 7,105 pounds at 15.5 percent moisture. If you want express that as bushels, divide by 56 to get 126.8 bushels per acre.

Corn, Soybean Growers Team Up To Promote Water Quality

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the American Soybean Association (ASA) will convene a series of forums in five states to better enable farmers to guide implementation of water quality programs affecting cropland.

The effort was launched in South Dakota when leaders of the South Dakota Corn Growers Association and South Dakota Soybean Growers Association met in Pierre with representatives of South Dakota Department of Environment and Natural Resources, South Dakota Association of Conservation Districts, South Dakota Department of Agriculture, and U.S. Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service.

The forums will establish a means of communication for grower leaders and state government agencies engaged in the process of implementing Clean Water Act requirements to ensure that water quality standards are met.

"State governments are developing and implementing Total Maximum Daily Load (TMDL) requirements that will have significant impacts on agricultural practices," according to NCGA President Roger Pine of Lawrence, Kan. and ASA President Mike Yost of Murdock, Minn. "Growers must be at the table early on in the process, looking for cooperative approaches that can be taken to meet Clean Water Act responsibilities."

Pine and Yost said the forums will enable participating growers and their state corn and soybean associations to better understand the TMDL concept, and the approach that will be taken in those states in allocating pollution control responsibilities within impaired watersheds. "Corn and soybean growers are seeking an interactive strategy to address water quality issues in their states, and these forums will help us shape that strategy," the NCGA and ASA leader said.

In addition to South Dakota, forums will be established in Iowa and Minnesota this year. Two more states will be selected next year for participation in the project. NCGA and ASA received a two-year grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and USDA to conduct the project.

NCGA and ASA have named Margie Williams as project director. Williams recently resigned as senior vice-president of the National Association of Wheat Growers to form Envisory, and environmental policy consulting business.

Maryland Farm Bureau Urges Increased Use Of Ethanol

RANDALLSTOWN, Md. — The Maryland Farm Bureau has requested the Environmental Protection Agency to step up efforts to promote the use of ethanol (an alcohol-based fuel additive manufactured from corn) as a clean burning, renewable fuel.

This action was promoted by the recent findings that the fuel additive MTBE poses a danger to water quality, in addition to President Clinton's announcement of his Biomass Initiative.

In a letter addressed to US EPA Administrator Carol Browner, Maryland Farm Bureau President Steve Weber wrote, "This is an excellent opportunity to promote alternatives such as ethanol in reformulated gasoline. Ethanol can help continue air quality gains while preserving the critical role of renewable fuels."

Since ethanol is a product derived from corn, Weber advised that new demands for ethanol could be a great boost to the nation's corn producers in these times of devastatingly low commodity prices. He cited a 1997 study by the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University entitled, "The Economic Impacts of the Demand of Ethanol."

The study indicates that the boost in corn production of ethanol would raise net farm income by $4.5 million and increase the price per bushel of corn by an extra 45 cents.

"Maryland produced nearly 38 million bushels of corn in 1997. Add to that the extra 45 cents per bushel due to ethanol demand, that equates to an extra $17 million for Maryland corn growers!" Weber said.

Referencing alternative fuel mandates under the Clean Air Act (due to nonattainment of federal air quality standards), Weber encouraged the use of ethanol when replacement of MTBEs becomes necessary. "Ethanol is a logical replacement for the MTBE additive. Clean air is vital in protecting not only the health of the public, but also the quality of water. Promoting of the use of ethanol is a win-win situation for the environment and for agriculture."

The U.S. EPA has called for a sharp reduction in the use of MTBE-blended fuel after discovering the fuel additive has leaked in to drinking water supplies in Maine and California.

NCGA Biotechnology Gathering Brings Major Corn Industry Stakeholders To The Table

ST. LOUIS, Mo. – For the first time ever, corn growers, industry officials, government representatives, and academia gathered June 30 and July 1 in Kansas City, Mo., to discuss biotechnology, enhance understanding of each stakeholder's position, and lay a foundation of mutual cooperation.

Coordinated by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), the industry roundtable drew about 160 representatives from all segments of the corn industry, as well as participants from France, Canada and Japan.

"Realizing that this is an overwhelmingly complex issue, it would be impossible to create a plan of action after only one meeting," said NCGA President Roger Pine of Lawrence, Kan. "However, we have begun the process and identified strategies that will allow us to work towards better managing the complex issue of bio-enhanced corn products."

Prior to the roundtable, the NCGA Task Force Committee, representing the four NCGA Corn Action Teams and made up of chairman Lynn Jensen, Lake Preston, S.D., Scott Wall, Yuma, Colo., Ron McCartney, Elgin, Iowa, and Ken McCauley, White Cloud, Kan., identified five specific objectives:

- Determine the current status of genetically enhanced corn and its marketability.
- Secure the U.S. position as a reliable supplier of corn in a global market.
- Discuss technology transfer and risk allocation.
- Evaluate worldwide approval of transgenic crops.
- Discuss the future of new technologies awaiting.

During roundtable breakout sessions, participants discussed the impact of biotechnology on four sectors of the corn complex.
